KEY INSIGHTS

Environmental, Social and Governance (“ESG”) investment issues continue to be hotly contested and increasingly politicized across the United States. Below are some key insights on the most recent state developments aimed at supporting and restricting ESG investing. These key insights will continue to be revised as this Tracker is updated.

- 2023 was a landmark year for state-level legislation concerning ESG investments. Nearly every state has now introduced legislation related to ESG, with the total number of ESG investment-related bills introduced since 2020 exceeding 200. Debevoise will continue to monitor the status of legislation and track other actions taken by elected officials and state entities as many states’ regular legislative sessions begin in January 2024.
- In many cases, bills that stalled in the 2023 legislative sessions are being reintroduced as new bills, either wholesale or in part (i.e., sections of old bills being worked into new bills that have been introduced since the start of 2024). Most bills that did not pass in the 2023 legislative sessions in states without carryover—where legislative committees are authorized to hold specific, identified bills in committee beyond the end of a legislative session—have been marked as failed for the purposes of this Tracker.

SUMMARY

Below is a summary by the numbers, of legislation supporting and restricting ESG investing considerations introduced across all states in the United States since June 2022, as further described in the Tracker. Developments other than legislation, while included in the Tracker below, and failed legislation prior to June 2022, are not counted for this Summary. The "STATES" column indicates how many states have introduced such legislation, regardless of whether passed. For the purposes of the "STATES" column only, each state is counted only once per row, regardless of how many pieces of relevant legislation its legislature has proposed, in order to provide an overview of the number of states supporting or restricting ESG investing.

March 2024: Several states sue SEC over Climate Disclosure Regulation	Since the SEC's adoption of its climate disclosure regulations on March 6, 2024, several states have filed suits to challenge the rule (including in the Second, Fifth, Sixth, Eighth, Eleventh and D.C. Circuits). Petitions include claims under the major questions doctrine, Administrative Procedures Act and First Amendment, among other bases. On March 15, 2024, the Fifth Circuit stayed the new regulations, pausing the Rule's applicability. On March 21, 2024, the Judicial Panel on Multidistrict Litigation lottery selected the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals as the venue for hearing a case consolidating nine petitions against the SEC's climate rule, which were filed in six different circuits. On April 4, 2024, the SEC exercised its discretion to stay the Rule to facilitate the "orderly judicial resolution" of the large number of petitions filed for judicial review of the Rule and to avoid "potential regulatory uncertainty" if registrants were to become subject to the Rule during pendency of the legal challenges. On April 10, 2024, House Republicans introduced a	Law 360 Bloomberg Law

The AGs have asked NZFSPA members to disclose their communications with other signatories on NZFSPA commitments as well as with non-signatories on setting net-zero and Scopes 1, 2 and 3 emission targets, among other topics. Similar information has also been requested from members of the NZFSPA Exchange (a sub-group of NZFSPA) and the Glasgow Financial Alliance for Net Zero (GFANZ). Members have until October 13, 2023, to respond. The letter asserts that many alliance members who directly compete with one another are undertaking "coordinated efforts" to align their products and services to meet the NZFSPA commitments. According to the letter, their collective market reach also pressures non-members to adopt emission targets and may cause a boycott of energy companies not aligned with their goals.	Letter

The letter asserts that the asset managers have disregarded their fiduciary duties to their clients by joining initiatives that seek to reduce greenhouse gas emissions, such as the NZAM and Climate Action 100+. The letter asserts that the asset managers, after joining such initiatives, failed to advertise all of their funds as ESG despite the emissions commitments made; failed to adequately explain the risks of funds advertised as ESG; and failed to disclose conflicts of interest between climate and financial motives. The letter also discusses a number of shareholder proposals where the asset managers will be required to choose between ESG policy and prioritizing financial returns, namely: (1) climate change resolutions in banking; (2) underwriting activities in insurance; (3) net zero compliance in utilities and energy; and (4) abortion and political spending. For each category, the letter notes that the shareholder proposal fails to explain any financial benefit to the company or to explain how the policy promotes financial goals over what the letter states are political and partisan ESG policies. 	ESG disclosure rules	certain parts of the rules. According to a press release, the governor determined that such vetoed portions are beyond the secretary of state's legal authority. The governor stated: "While I agree that ESG investment guidance is improper and misleading, the answer to too much government interference in our lives is not more government. No government should have the right to direct people's personal investment strategies."
	December 2023: Office of Secretary of State seeks to require ESG investment disclosures	The secretary of state proposed amendments to Wyoming's Securities Rules with the Wyoming Administrative Rules System to require disclosure of ESG investment strategies by requiring advisers, broker-dealers and securities agents to disclose to their customers or clients if they are considering such factors in their investment decisions. The amendments to the rules have been sent to the governor for review and approval.	Proposed Rules Packet ESG Dive
	August 2023: State Loan and Investment Board adopts ESG Policy	The Board adopted a policy condemning use of ESG criteria in investment decisions, stating that such ideological investment criteria "have crippled, corrupted, disadvantaged, subverted, damaged, or otherwise harmed the children, citizens, industry, and the financial well-being of Wyoming and America." Under the new policy, investment managers must seek "the highest total return on a risk adjusted basis" and, if the state treasurer believes an investment partner is "acting in a non-pecuniary manner," the office will reach out and take action.	Wyoming Truth
	May 2023: Treasurer's Statement on ESG	The Wyoming state treasurer's office recently stated that the "goal of Wyoming's investment managers should be to maximize Wyoming's risk-adjusted return, not be the government or act like non-elected representatives for cultural change." The treasurer's office has deemed that fiduciary decisions can only be based on pecuniary factors" which "do not include the furtherance of social, political, or ideological interests."	Treasurer Statement
