

PRIME FACTS

AUSTRALIAN PRIME MINISTERS CENTRE

Governors-General of Australia

Left: The Earl of Hopetoun, Australia's first Governor-General 1901-1903 National Library of Australia

> Right: Quentin Bryce Australia's 25th Governor-General 2008-Office of the Governor-General

No. Governor-General

- 1. John Adrian Louis Hope, 7th Earl of Hopetoun
- 2. Hallam Tennyson, 2nd Baron Tennyson
- 3. Henry Northcote, 1st Baron Northcote
- 4. William Ward, 2nd Earl of Dudley
- 5. Thomas Denman, 3rd Baron Denman
- 6. Sir Ronald Munro-Ferguson
- 7. Henry Forster, 1st Baron Forster
- 8. John Baird, 1st Baron Stonehaven
- 9. Sir Isaac Alfred Isaacs
- 10. Brig. Gen. Alexander Hore-Ruthven, 1st Baron Gowrie
- 11. H.R.H. Prince Henry, Duke of Gloucester
- 12. Sir William John McKell
- 13. Field Marshal Sir William Joseph Slim
- 14. William Morrison, 1st Viscount Dunrossil
- 15. William Sidney, 1st Viscount De L'Isle
- 16. Richard Gardiner Casey, Baron Casey
- 17. Sir Paul Meernaa Caedwalla Hasluck
- 18. Sir John Kerr
- 19. Sir Zelman Cowen
- 20. Sir Ninian Stephen
- 21. William George Hayden
- 22. Sir William Deane
- 23. Right Rev. Dr. Peter Hollingworth
- 24. Maj. Gen. Michael Jeffery
- 25. Quentin Bryce AC

Term of office

- 1.1.1901 9.1.1903
- 9.1.1903 21.1.1904
- 21.1.1904 9.9.1908
- 9.9.1908 31.7.1911
- 31.7.1911 18.5.1914
- 18.5.1914 6.10.1920
- 6.10.1920 8.10.1925
- 8.10.1925 21.1.1931
- 21.1.1931 23.1.1936
- 23.1.1936 30.1.1945
- 30.1.1945 11.3.1947
- 11.3.1947 8.5.1953
- 8.5.1953 2.2.1960
- 2.2.1960 3.2.1961
- 3.8.1961 7.5.1965
- 7.5.1965 30.4.1969
- 30.4.1969 11.7.1974
- 11.7.1974 8.12.1977
- 8.12.1977 29.7.1982
- 29.7.1982 16.2.1989
- 16.2.1989 16.2.1996
- 16.2.1996 29.6.2001
- 29.6.2001 29.5.2003
- 29.5.2003 5.9.2008
- 5.9.2008 -

Australia is a constitutional monarchy. The Queen of Australia is Her Majesty Elizabeth II, who is also Sovereign of the United Kingdom, Canada, New Zealand and 12 other countries. The nations which share this monarchy are known as Commonwealth Realms.

Because the Queen lives in the United Kingdom, she is represented in Australia by the Governor-General, who is in effect Australia's Head of State. Some authorities argue that the Governor-General is Australia's Head of State in every respect: others disagree. The role of the Governor-General is set out in chapter two of the Constitution, which establishes the Executive Government of Australia. Under the principles of responsible government, the Governor-General is obliged to accept the advice of his or her ministers, except in unusual circumstances. The Governor-General must assent to bills passed by the Australian Parliament before they can become law. The Governor-General also presides over meetings of the Federal Executive Council. The Governor-General opens and dissolves Parliament, commissions the Ministry, and is Commander-in-Chief of the Australian Defence Force. On one occasion, in 1975, the Governor-General dismissed the Prime Minister of the day on account of his inability to obtain Supply and appointed a caretaker Prime Minister in his stead.

The Governor-General is appointed by the Queen on the advice of the Australian government. This was not always the case. During the first thirty years of Federation the British government recommended whom the Sovereign should appoint. In 1930, Australian Prime Minister James Scullin asserted his right to advise King George V on the appointment of a new Governor-General. After initial resistance the King agreed to appoint Scullin's choice, the Australian-born Sir Isaac Isaacs, a distinguished jurist and Federationist, who had also been a member of the first Commonwealth Parliament.

Governors-General are not appointed for fixed terms. A typical appointment is for five years, but there have also been shorter and longer terms.

When the Governor-General is absent from Australia, his or her duties are performed by the Administrator of the Commonwealth. All State Governors hold a dormant commission to act as Administrator. Usually, the longest-serving Governor will become the Administrator should this be necessary. An Administrator also takes over if a Governor-General dies or resigns.

Prior to Isaacs, every Governor-General was British, and all but one were peers. It remained common to appoint British aristocrats as Governor-General until the early 1960s. One, the Duke of Gloucester, was a member of the Royal Family. Only Australians have held the position since 1965.

The Governor-General lives at Government House in the Canberra suburb of Yarralumla. Government House sits on the shores of Lake Burley Griffin and has been used by every Governor-General since 1927. The Governor-General also has a second official residence at Admiralty House on the northern foreshore of Sydney Harbour.

In 1999 a proposal for Australia to become a republic, replacing the Governor-General with a President elected by a two thirds majority of the Federal Parliament, was defeated at a national referendum. The No vote was supported by 55% of Australian voters and carried all states. The issue retains some currency in Australian political debate, but does not appear to have substantial public support as a matter of high priority.

Further Reading

- Australian Republican Movement website: http://www.republic.org.au/
- Australians for a Constitutional Monarchy website: http://www.norepublic.com.au/
- Carroll, Brian, Australia's Governors-General: from Hopetoun to Jeffery. (Kenthurst: Rosenberg Publishing, 2004)
- Constitution Education Fund Australia website: http://www.cefa.org.au/
- Cunneen, Christopher, Kings' Men: Australia's Governors-General from Hopetoun to Isaacs, (Sydney: George Allen & Unwin, 1983)
- Governor-General of Australia's website: http://www.qq.qov.au
- Parliamentary Library, Frequently Asked Questions about the Office of Governor-General: http://www.aph.gov.au/library/pubs/rn/2003-04/04rn10.htm
- Smith, David, Head of state: the Governor-General, the Monarchy, the Republic and the Dismissal. (Paddington: Macleay Press, 2005)
- Twomey, Anne. The Chameleon Crown: The Queen and Her Australian Governors (Sydney: Federation Press, 2006)