

THE SIMONS CENTER

FOR ETHICAL LEADERSHIP AND INTERAGENCY COOPERATION

ROBERT R. ULIN Founder and Director

Bob Ulin is a retired army officer with extensive foreign assignments and engagements in Europe, Southeast Asia, and Africa. He is an accomplished military operator, author, educator, and diplomat. He had two combat tours in Vietnam: one as an artilleryman, the other as an infantry advisor. He lived and worked in Europe for 17 years. He served at the U.S. Embassy in Brussels and in the multinational military headquarters at the Supreme Headquarters Allied Powers Europe (SHAPE) and at its political headquarters at the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO).

Bob had several interagency assignments dealing with the departments of State, Energy, and the CIA. He is published author of five books, negotiator, strategic planner, proposal writer, and advisor to foreign militaries.

He spent 12 years in the for-profit sector working for private sector companies involved in organization development, information technology, and research and analysis. He was the director of business development for a privately held organizational development firm that included several Fortune 500 clients: Exxon Mobile, Chevron, Monsanto, and Sprint. When he retired from the for-profit sector, he was the Vice President for Government Services of the Triple-I corporation. He joined the faculty of the U.S. Army Command and General Staff College (CGSC) in 2005 and was asked to develop and lead the CGSC Foundation. He became the founding CEO of the Foundation in 2006 and led its development raising over $13 million. In 2013 he retired from the CGSC Foundation and established the Center for Transitional Leadership, Inc. to help retiring and separating military personnel find meaningful leadership positions in the private sector.

Bob also started the Ulin Solutions Group, LLC to help organizations develop more efficient and effective organizations. He's an accomplished executive coach whose clients include Honeywell, United Way, the Children's Bereavement Center in San Antonio, TX and the Midwest Biomedical Research Foundation in Kansas City among others.

Bob has two graduate degrees and is a graduate of an executive management program of the John F. Kennedy School, Harvard University. He holds certifications in Multinational Program Management, Training and Development, National Security Management, and Executive Leadership.

He is the Founder and Director of the Arthur D. Simons Center for Ethical Leadership and Interagency Cooperation, a program of the CGSC Foundation, Inc. funded by Mr. H. Ross Perot, Sr.
