

DUMMIES' THAWALLES.

1721

B. xxiv. Dav

Suum cuiqz.

Tho: Hearne 1725.

Et dono V. amicis. Thomæ Rawlinsoni, arm.

etc 6365.

—quod nec Jovis ira, nec ignes,
Nec poterit ferrum, nec edax abolere vetustas.

THOMAS GRAY.

GLASGOW.

~~John Gray~~ 71

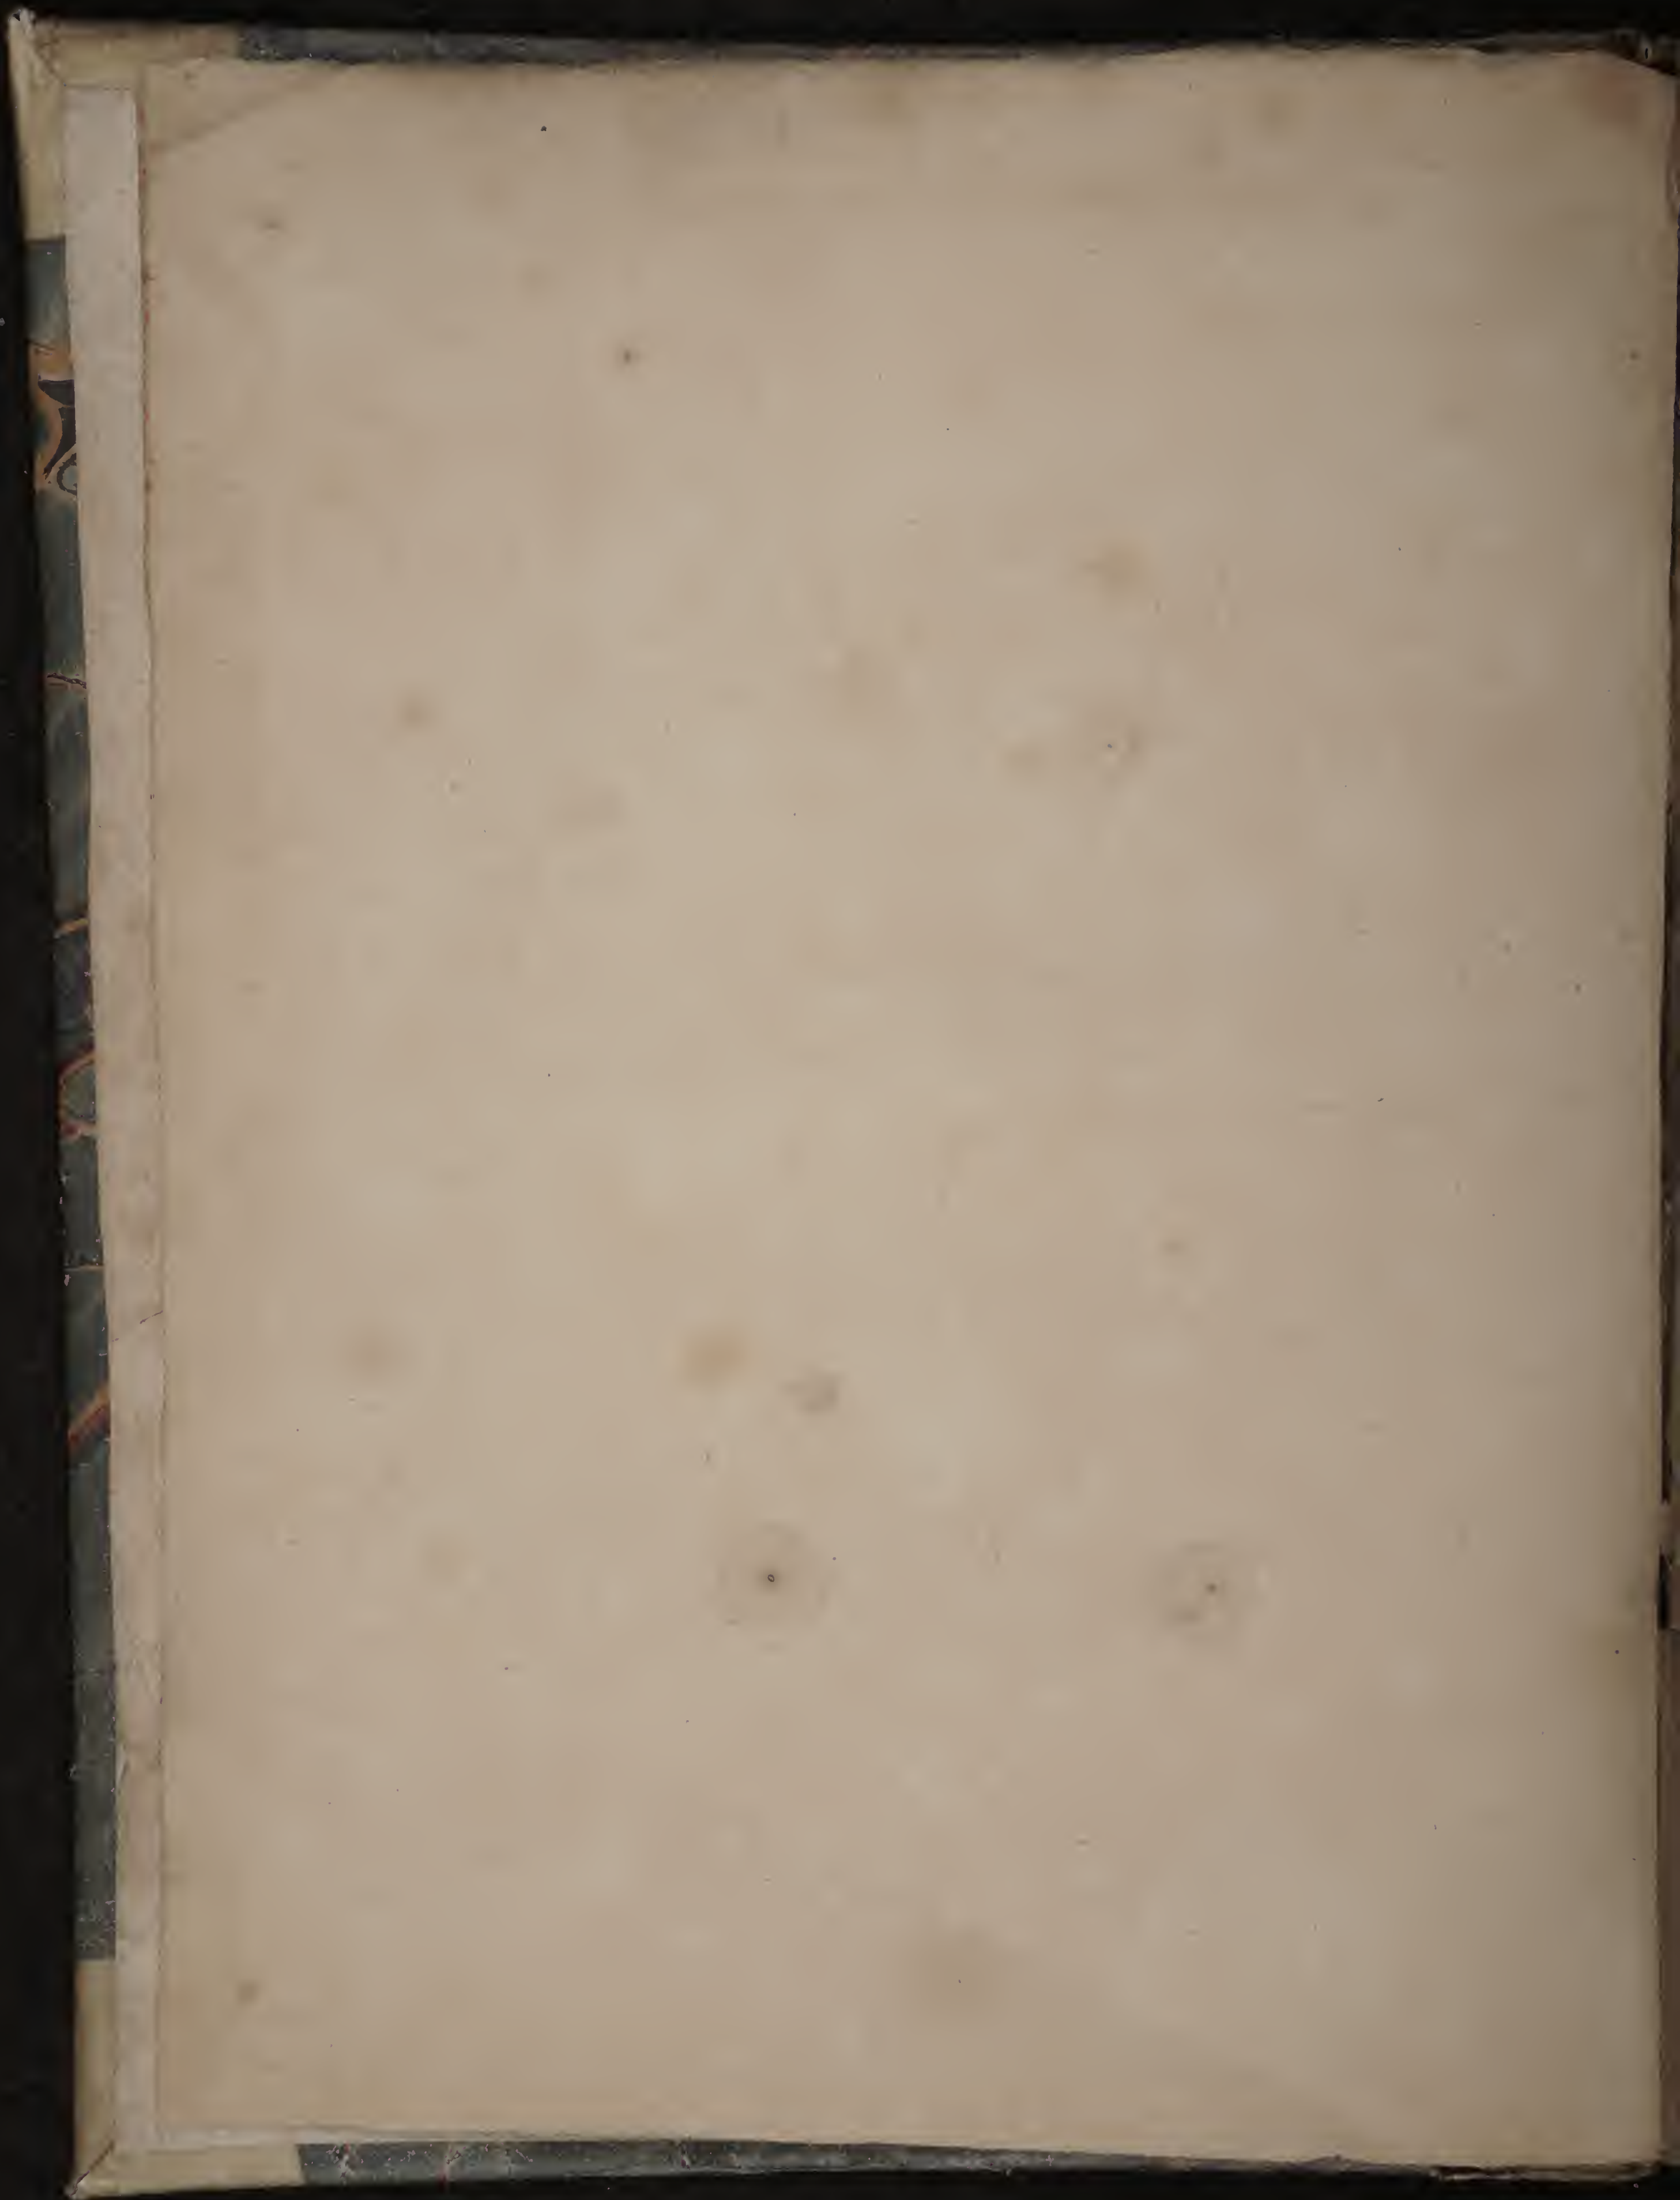

58.D.32

25722

This book appears to have belonged to Thomas De Witt, the learned antiquary and his autograph opposite.

Collected & perfect

[Signature]

O Henry
A TRUE RELATION OF THE TRAVAILÉS

and most miserable Captiuitie of

William Davies, Barber-Surgion of London, under the Duke of

FLORENCE.

Wherein is truly set downe the manner of his taking, the long time of his slauerie, and meanes of his deliuerie, after eight yeeres, and ten moneths Captiuitie in the Gallies.

Discovering many mayne Landes, Ilandes, Rivers, Cities, and townes, of the Christians and Infidels, the condition of the people, and the manner of their Countrey: with many more strange things, as in the Booke is briefely and plainely expressed.

By William Davies, Barber-Surgion of London, and borne in the Citie of Hereford.

L O N D O N

Printed for Nicholas Bourne, and are to be sold at the South-entrance of the Royall Exchange, 1614.

[Faint, illegible text, likely bleed-through from the reverse side of the page]

A Table of all those places that he hath beene at, and in, since his departure, Alphabetically composed. viz.

A

Alexandria, A Citie in Turkie.
Argier, A Citie in Barbary.
Alegant, A Citie in Spayne.
Arnacca, A Riuer in the West Indies.
Armocho, A Riuer in the West Indies.

B

B Raats, In the Mayne, a mayne land of the Turkes.
Bizert, A towne in Barbary.
Bona, A towne in Barbary.
Baye, A towne in Brazile.
Budgie, A towne in Barbary.

C

C Cicillia, A famous Iland of the Spaniards.
Canarie, A famous Iland of the Venetians.
Ciprus, A famous Iland of the Turkes.
Corrigo, An Iland of the Venetians.
Christiana, An Iland of the Greekes.
Corrane, A towne of the Turkes.
Corphou, A Citie of the Venetians.
Corfigo, An Iland of the Genowes.
Callary, A Citie vpon Sardina.
Carthageine, A towne in Spayne.
Cales, A Citie of the Spaniards.
Cornes, An Iland of the Spaniards.

The Table.

D

D Enei, A towne in Castillia.

F

F Lorence, A famous Citie of the great Dukes.

Famagosta, A Citie vpon Cyprus.

Fernandobuck, A towne in Brazyle.

Fisk, An Iland of the Spaniards.

Floures, An Iland of the Spaniards.

G

G Oodza, An Iland inhabited by Greekes.

Genowey, A famous Citie in Italy.

Grand Maligo, A Citie in Spayne.

Giano, A River in the West Indies.

Gratose, An Iland of the Spaniards.

I

I Ota, An Iland of the Turkes.

Iuersy, An Iland of the Spaniards.

Iublatores, A towne of the Spaniards.

L

L Ilbo, An Iland gouerned by Spaniards and Italians.

Lisborne, A famous Citie in Portugall.

Luca, A Citie in Tuskanie.

Ligorne, A famous Citie of the Duke of Florence.

M

M Alia, A famous Iland.

Mantua, A famous Citie in Italy.

Madona, A towne in Turkie.

Maluedra, A towne in Castile.

Mayorke, An Iland of the Spaniards.

Myniork, An Iland of the Spaniards.

Massegan, A Towne in Barbary.

Muggadore.

The Table.

Muggadore, An Iland in Barbary.
Muria, An Iland in the West Indies.

N

N Aples, A famous Citie in Calabria.
Naneyrne, A towne of the Turkes.

P

P Alerma, A famous Citie in Sicillia.
Petras, A Citie in Turkie.
Portercula, A strong towne of the Spaniards.
Pumebien, A towne of the Spaniards.
Peza, A Citie in Tuskany.
Porta Rico, An Iland in the West Indies.
Portaferare, A strange towne of the Duke of Florence.
Porta longe, A towne of the Spaniards.

R

R Rome, The chiefe Citie of the Pope.
Regi, A towne in Calabria.

S

S Trumbula, A burning Iland.
Sapientia, An Iland of the Turkes.
Salerna, A towne in Calabria.
Syppa de Vecchia, An ancient Citie.
Sardina, A famous Iland of the Spaniards.
St. Miries, An Iland of the Spaniards.
St. Lucas, A Citie of the Spaniards.
Sapphie, A towne in Barbary.
Sancta Cruce, A towne in Barbary.
Santa Lucia, An Iland of the Spaniards.
Santa Marcyne, An Iland of the Spaniards.
St. Michaels, An Iland of the Spaniards. (Turkes.
Scanderune, In the bottome of the straits, governed by St. Georgis, An Iland of the Spaniards.
Seena, A Citie in Tuskany.

The Table.

T

THe Rhodes, held by the Turkes.
The Sirauales, An Island inhabited by Greekes.
Tarrant, A Towne in Calabria.
The Geta A towne of the Popes.
Tunis, A great Citie in Barbary.
Titnan, A towne in Barbarie.
Tangere, A Towne in Barbary.
The River of Amazons in the West Indies.
Trinidado, An Island of the West Indies.
Teneriefe, An Island of the Spaniards.
The Grand Canaries, inhabited by Spaniards.

V

VAlentia*, A famous Citie in Castile.
Vize Maligo, A towne in Spayne.
Valdeny, A towne in Brachademayne.

W

WIapocho*, A River in the West Indies.

Z

ZAnt*, An Island of the Venetians.
Zambula, An Island of the Turkes.

HEere in this Table haue I not spoken of France, nor of any part of the Low-Countries, neither of Ireland, in all which places I haue beene, nor yet of England, the Garden of the world, because I count it a folly to tell the Master of the house the condition of the Seruants, for euery man by naturall reason can discover his owne home.

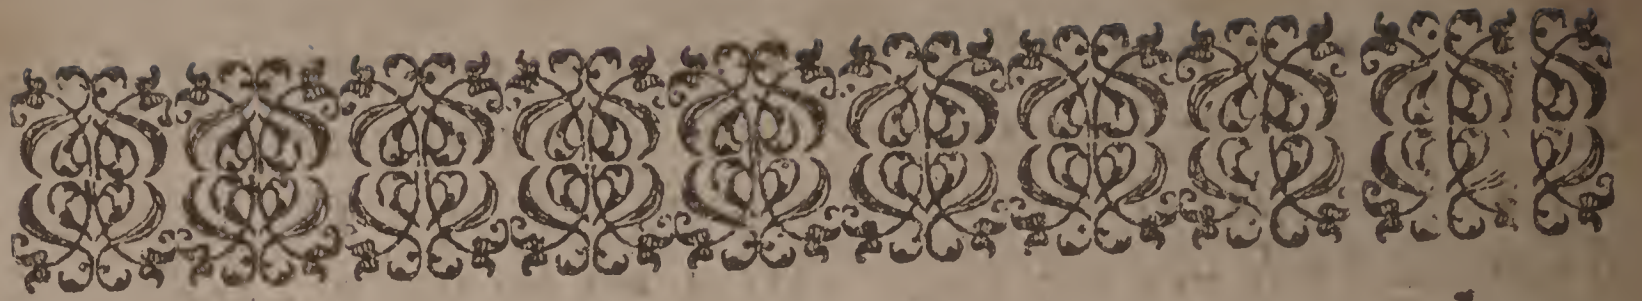

Now haue I thought it fit out of the former Table to select twelue principall places, in discouery whereof I shall not omit as occasion is offered to speake of the rest, and how I came to euery place, with the names of Ships and Gallies, with the owners, and Masters, and how many leagues each of these twelue places are from England.

For prooffe of what I haue herein written, concerning my slavery and thraldome, I haue procured, though not without some cost and more travell, sixe of the chiefest masters of ships of London, who see me, and relieved me often during my thraldome, to subscribe their hands hereunto, as also the hands of diuers Masters and Surgions of other places in England, whose names follow, viz.

- |                    |  |
|--------------------|--|
| Robert Thorneston. | { Master of the good ship called the Royall Marchants of London.                     |
| Thomas Gardiner.   | { Master of the good ship called the Triumph of London.                              |
| Robert Bradshaw.   | { Master of the good ship called the William and Thomas of London.                   |
| Thomas Rickman.    | { Master of the good ship called the Mary Anne of London.                            |
| James Davies.      | { Master of the good ship called the Isaak of London.                                |
| George Millard.    | { Master of the good ship called the May-flowre of London.                           |
| Denis Davies.      | { Barber Surgion of London.  |
| Thomas Rousley.    | { Barber Surgion of London.  |
| Charles Hearne.    | { Barber Surgion of Bristow.   |
| Richard Wright.    | { Barber Surgion of Plymouth.  |
| Walter Mathew.     | { Owner of the good ship called the Mathewes farms of Plymouth.                      |
| Richard Rowe.      | { Owner of the good ship called the Portion of Milbrook, in the countie of Cornwell. |

Many others more as well Noble men, Knights, Gentlemen, as owners, Masters, and Surgions did see, and can witness my slavery, whose hands likewise I might easily haue procured, but that considering the businesse to be of no great importance, I held it needlesse to trouble either them or my selfe any further, and these present witnesses are sufficient.

The

The twelue principall places are thus distinguished. VIZ.

Three Cities, and three Ilands of the Christians, and three Cities, and three Ilands of the Infidels.

*The Christians be, the Pope, the Spaniards, and the Italian,
The infidels be, the Turke, the Moore, and the Indian.*

The Names of the twelue places.

- 1 C Luia de Vecchia, A Citie of the Popes.
- 2 A Argeir, A Citie of the Turkes.
- 3 T onys, A great Citie of the Moores.
- 4 L sgorne, A Citie of the Italians.
- 5 N aples, A famous Citie of the Spaniards.
- 6 T he Riuer of the Amazons in the West Indies.
- 7 M alta, an Iland of the Popes, very famous.
- 8 C yprus, A famous Iland of the Turkes.
- 9 S icyllia, A famous Iland of the Spaniards.
- 10 M uggadore, An Iland of the Moores.
- 11 C andy, A famous Iland of the Italians.
- 12 M orria, An Iland of the Indians.

The Trauailes and miserable Capti- uitie of William Dauies, Barber-Sur- gion of L O N D O N.

Departed out of England the 28. of Iauuarie 1597. in the good ship named the Francis of Saltash, in the countie of of Cornwell, Master Tyball Geare, Dwner, and William Lewellyn, Master of her, being laden with Fish, and Be-rings, and such like commodities, then bound for the Strayts and to arrive at Ciuita de Vecchia to the will and pleas-sure of God: where we arrived the first day of March insuing, whose description followeth by me William Dauies Barber-Surgion of London, and borne in the Citie of Heriford.

I.

The Description of Ciuita de Vecchia.

Ciuita de Vecchia is an ancient Citie of the Popes, lying Distant from in low ground, a dayes iourney from Rome by land, this England City lieth close vpon the Sea, very strongly fortified, and plan- leagues 700.
ted with Ordinance, to the East side a strong Castle, or Fort:
And also the like vpon the West side, in this place the Popes Galies lie, and shipping. For there is a harbour, and sayre mould for their safetie. For the Pope hath no other place for Ships or Galies but Rome, and there none will come by but small Barkes, and Boates, and such like, by reason of the shall-ownesse of the Riuer. In this Ciuita de Vecchia are altogether
the

The miserable Captiuitie of

ther Romanes, wholly professing the Romish Religion, saying directly that the Pope is God on earth, and that he can forgive any sinne whatsoeuer being committed, which makes the most part of them, or all, runne desperately into most deadly sinnes. For very further they hold it no great sinne, being committed, receiuing of the Popes pardon, or else getting into some Monasterie where they may be confessed, and absolved, whereby no Law can take hold of them at their comming forth, being apt and readie within a weeke, or fortnight after to commit the like further, then receiuing the like pardon, or absolution, as befoze they had done: and thus many bloudie minded men continue their life-time, for it is an easie matter for a man to haue his aduersarie kild, or popsoned for money, although his executioner neuer see him till such time as he committeth this bloudie deed, being hired by another.

Also in this Countrey their women are very lewde and wicked, for euen in that ancient Citie of Rome, there are many thousands of lewd liuing women that pay monethly vnto the Pope for the sinnefull vse of their wicked bodies: some pay five Crownes a moneth, and so from five Crownes to one, for they are rated according to their outward shew, and for the non-payment of this monethly pay, they shall haue their goods strained and carried out of their houses, or chambers, by the Popes officers, and kept from them till such time as satisfaction is made to the Pope. So it is lawfull for any man to vse any of these women as his owne wife, neither shall he be molested or troubled, or otherwise indangered, so he escape secret occasions of danger, for this woman will be as dutifull vnto him as his seruant, alwaies attending his pleasure for his diet or any thing else belonging vnto him: he giuing her content with his purse; but she not receiuing content may as lawfully arrest him, and cast him into prison till such time as she doth receiue satisfaction, being recovered by Law: for they hold their liuing by the Pope.

Now as I haue spoken of two deadly sinnes wherein they erre, so will I speake of one thing wherein some of them are to be commended, that is this. If there be any Christian, of what

William Davies Barber-Surgion of London.

What Passion soever, poore and in distresse, making his case knowne, and asking for Christs sake, he shall be relieved, with all those necessaries whereof he is destitute, as apparrell, meat, and drinke, and some money, though it be but little: if he be sicke, then shall he be put into an Hospitall, where he shall be choisely attended upon, having good lodging, daintie diet, and comfortable Physicke for the restoring of his health, whether he be Papist or Protestant: but if he be a Papist, he shall be the better bled, and if he be a Protestant they will vse all meanes they can to convert him, but force him to nothing at all. In these Countries it is dangerous for an Englishman being a Protestant to speake any thing against the Pope, or his Religion, especially vnto another Englishman that is a Papist, yet this English Papist will seeke all the meanes possible to intrappe the Protestant, and will speake ill words of himselfe, to draw him to the like, but when he hath made him vtter the secrets of his heart, then will he make it knowne, and moze then the Protestant spake, to some chiefe man of a Church, by whom he shall be forced to aiter his Religion, or to be burned, or put in some secret prison where he shall be starued to death, and this is the manner and fashion in all Countries of Christendome within the Popes Jurisdiction, not onely of the treacherie of the English Papists, but also of the other deadly sinnes which I touched befoze, as their murder and adultry: and in like manner of their generall compassion, to a distressed Christian. What I haue heere written, I speake not of heare-say, nor by imagination, but directly haue seene, and of mine owne knowledge you may speake it, being too long a time amongst them, against my will.

---

II.

The Description and discouery of Argeir.

ARgeir, is a maruellous strong Citie, and governed by the Turk, lying vpon the side of an vpright hill, close vpon the Sea, this Citie is very strongly fortified with Castels, Forts, Distant from England
leagues 480.

The miserable Captiuitie of

and platfoymes, with great stoze of Ordnance planted about it, also there are many Gallies belonging to this place, which doe much offend the Christians, in taking of their ships, Tartanes and Satties, and other small vessels, making all the Christians that they take slaues, & selling of them in their markets like horses: for according to age and strength they are prized. This Citie is gouerned by a King, being bassall to the great Turke. Also there are great stoze of Janizaries in it, to the number of 20, or 30000. at one time: these Janizaries are chiefe Souldiers, and gouerned by a Dane, which is a generall vnder the great Turke. These Turkes are goodly people of person, and of a very faire complexion, but very villains in minde, for they are altogether Sodomites, and doe all things contrarie to a Christian. For they doe neuer lye in a bed, nor feede vpon a Table; yet their feeding and diet is very plentifull, their bedding and apparrell is very neat and costly, the manner of their lodging is thus: There is a very faire table in a roome, about threë yards in breadth, and as many in length standing in height one yard from the ground, and thereon they vse to spread a double quilt very costly with many curious Cushions, in stead of Pillowes, whereon he lieth downe in his shirt, and linnen bitches onely, without any other covering, by reason of the heat of the countrey. Also in the same roome he hath another Table laid after the same fashion very richly, whereon his wiues doe lie, but she that likes him best, he will take to accompany him for the night. A Turke may haue as many wiues as he pleaseth, so he be able to buy them, and by the number of his wiues, most commonly his substance is knowne, for the richer he is, the moze wiues he hath, the pozer the fewer: yet neuer married to none of them, but onely the first, but maintaining of them all. It is very dangerous for a Christian to be found in the company of any Turkes woman, for being found together, he shall be forced to turne Turke, or else be put to death, and the said woman also shall be put into a sacke, which being made fast, she shall be slung into the Sea, whether they commit the sinne or not. These Turkes are very zealous in their religion, acknowledging God; and Mahomet a soliciter for 11

50

49
25
14
241

399 .04 .0
1629 .00 .0
443 .00 .0
3485 .03 .0

67-05-0
67-16-0
67-01-0
67-06-0
67-01-0

for

William Davies Barber-Surgion of London.

for their finnes. A Turke will keepe his word if he sweares by his head, putting his hand vpon his forehead. In this countrey there is great store of gold and rich Marchants; the manner of their Churches and comming to Prayer is thus. The Church is very faire within, with many hundreds of Lampes burning therein, all matted vnder foote, without any kinde of picture, or seats, also most of them doe pray vpon Beads. In the morning on the top of the Church they hang out a white flag, and in the after noone a blew one for a signe of their comming to Church, then goeth eight or tenne of them on the very top of the Church, and crie with a loud voice. Volla, volla hamdrulla and shalla. that is to say God, God, helpe vs at thy pleasure, and this is their ordinary warning to come to Church, as we vse Bells in Christendome, for they abhorre the ringing of Bells, being contrary to their Prophets command.

A Turke chooseth his first wife after this maner. He neuer seeth his wife till she come to the Church to be married, for the match is made by their friends, neither is a Turkish womans face to be seene, because their faces are continually covered going through the streets, both young and old: neither shall a mans childe after he is tenne yeeres old euer see his mother. A Turke is Circumcised after this manner. The better Gentleman he is, the longer he staves afoze he be Circumcised, but the time being come, then is he put vpon a very faire white horse, being very costly attired, and before him goeth two, or three hundred by two and two in purple coates, bearing waxe candles in their hands, and after them followeth a great many playing on diffused Instruments making of a great noise, then followeth a Bull covered with very faire Arras, and his hoznes gilded, and next rideth he that shall be Circumcised, with all his friends following, and thus he rideth to the place of Circumcision, where they cut off the foreskinne of his yard, naming of him Morat, Shebane, or Holan, or some such like name: then will they take the Bull, and turne his head to to the Eastward, then cut his throat, saying, this day wee haue done a good deed, then they cut the Bull in peeces, and distribute it among his friends, and kindred, and so they returne home where they doe feast with great ioy.

The miserable Captiuitie of

The manner of a Christian turning Turke, is thus. He is put vpon a horse with his face towards the taylor, and a Bow and an Arrow in his hand, then the picture of Christ is carried before him with his feete vppwards, at the which he drawes his Bow with the Arrow therein, and thus he rideth to the place of Circumcision, cursing his father that begate him, and his mother that bore him, his Country, and all his kindred: then comming to the place of Circumcision, he is Circumcised, receiuing a name, & denying his Christian name, so that euer after he is called a Runagado, that is, a Christian denying Christ and turned Turke: of which sort there are more in Turkie and Barbary then of naturall Turkes. The manner of their iudgement for offending of the Law touching death, eyther for theft or murther, is thus: within foure houres after he is taken, he is condemned by certaine chiefe Souldiers, and presently put to death after this manner, viz. gantned, staked or beat to death. Their gantning is after this manner: He sitteth vpon a wall, being five fadomes high, within two fadomes of the top of the wall, right vnder the place where he sits, is a strong Iron hooke fastned, being very sharpe, then is he thrust off the wall vpon this hooke with some part of his bodie, and there he hangeth sometimes two or thre daies before he dieth. Staking to death is thus: A round peece of wood thre yards long, and as big as a mans leg, being sharpe at one end, is taken and driuen in at the fundament of the offender. and out at his shoulder, and so they let him lie till he be dead, which sometimes will not be in a day or two. The manner of beating to death is thus: They take the offender, and lay him down vpon his backe, being naked, and with two double ropes, two severall men, one on the one side, and the other on the other side of him, beate on his belly till he is dead. But these deaths are very seldome vled, because they are so fearefull to the offenders, yet I haue seene them all executed.

III.

The Description and discovery of Tunys.

Tunys is a great Citie in Barbary, inhabited by Mozes, and some Turkes and Jewes. This City is spacious, and lieth in low ground, eight miles from the Sea; there belongs to this Citie a verie fayre Castle, named the Galletta: This Castle is very strong of Ordnance, and governed by Turkes: betwixt the Citie and this Castle lyeth the ancient Citie of Carthage, sunke, by the report of all the Inhabitants thereabouts: but this did I see my selfe going by to Tunys in a Boate, the foundation of many houses for the space of foure or five miles, the water being very cleare, and in depth a fadome and a halfe.

Distant from England
leagues 600.

The Mozes of this Countrey are altogether in Religion like to the Turkes, and also in habite: they are verie light of foote, and gallant horsemen: they cannot indure Hogs flesh, nor the drinking of Wine, for they drinke water altogether, except it be sometimes Aqua-vitæ. The manner of their living in the Countrey is thus: They will goe five or six hundred together, Men, Women, and Children, with their Camels, Asses, and Sheepe, together with all their Poultry, under the side of a Mountaine, where every man pitcheth his Tent, living every man to himselfe, having his Wife and Children about him, with his Servants and Cattell, thus many Tents are pitched together, to the bignesse of a little Towne, continuing there till such time as their Cattell have eaten up the grasse, and then being able to stay there no longer, they remove to another place, where they live as before they had done: and thus they doe spend their lives. By reason the Countrey is continually hotte, their feeding is plentiful, but their apparrell poore and bare, neyther have they any, but what they buy with the increase of their Cattell, carrying them often to the Townes, Cities, and Market places neere, where they have sale for them. These Mozes

The miserable Captiuitie of

Moyses are very ingenious people, cunning and treacherous. Now leave we Tunys in the same Ship that I came out of England in, named the Francis of Salrash, being bound to Syo within the Arches of Archipelago, and freighted with Turkish goods by Turkes, and some Turkes aboard with vs, for we traded as well with the Turke as the Christian: but we had not sailed aboue foure leagues out of our Port in the night season, but that we were most fiercely set vpon by fire of the Duke of Florence his Gallies, who being in continuall warre with the Turke, take vs as a Turkish prize) which spit fire like diuels, to our great discomfort, but at length couraging of our selues in Gods mercies, we continued fight with them, to the losse of many a mans life of each side, but all in vaine for vs, for they were fortie for one of vs, and our Ship tozne downe to the water with their Ordinance, our mayne Mast, and mislen Mast, shot by the board, the one end of the Mast with all the sayles lying in the Sea, the other end aboard: thus were we taken, and stript every man starke naked, and then were we distributed, some into one Gallie, and some into another, where we had as many Irons knocked vpon vs, and more, than then we were able to beare. Our Ship presently sent to Ligorne, being mended as well as they could, but we in the Gallies, continued a moneth before we came thither, to the losse of many of our liues: but at length comming thither, as many of vs as were left aliuie were thus intertaind. We were all shauen both head and beard, and every man had giuen him a red coate, and a red cap, telling of vs that the Duke had made vs all Slaues, to our great woe and grieue: where I continued eight yeeres and ten moneths in this flauerie, as in the next discoverie shall be truly spoken of.

---

IIII

The Description and discoverie of Ligorne.

Distant from England
leagues 630.

Ligorne is a Citie of the Duke of Florence, and lyeth in low ground, hauing many towers without it, standing in the Sea,

William Dawies Barber-Surgion of London.

Sea, also to this Towne doth belong a wilde road, and two very faire moulds for the safetie of the Dukes Gallies. In the entrance of these moulds is a very strong Castle with great store of Ordnance planted: also the Towne is very strongly fortified, for it is the chiefe garrison of the great Dukes, where is continually great store of Souldiers in pay. Which Souldiers are alwaies employed in his shipping or Gallies, wherewith he both more offend the Turke then all Christendome, for they doe take Gallies and Carmizals and Bizigantens, and Townes of the Turkes and Moores: possessing of Men, Women, and Children, and selling them in Markets, like to Horses, Cowes, or Sheepe, reserving the strongest for his owne flauery: In this place I liued eight yeeres, and ten moneths: three yeeres of this time I liued in this manner, from Sunne rising to Sunne set, chained in a Cart like a horse, receiving more blowes then any Cart-horse in England, our diet being Bread and Water, and not so much Bread in three daies as we might haue eaten at once, thus we were vled to goe forthie or fiftie Carts together, being all slaues: our lading would be Sand, or Lyme, or Bricke, or some such like, and to draw it whither the Officers appointed vs, for their buildings. These Italians are very deceitfull people, for when they laugh in a mans face, they will seeke to kill him, yet they are very cowardes being naturall Italians: their women are altogether wicked and lewde. Three yeeres being spent in this manner: all we English-men were called as many as were left aliuie, making choise of the ablest of vs to goe into the Gallies, of which I was one chosen, then did my miserie increase many-fold, for then I was made a Gally-slaue to row at an Oare, where our former diet lessened, but blowes increased, to the losse of many of our liues. We were shaven Head and Beard euery eight or tenth day, being alwaies naked, but onely a payze of linnen breeches and chaines continually. In this time I was at the taking of many a Towne and Gally of the Turkes, though sore against my will, seeing of many Cities, Ilands, and mayne Lands in the time of my flauerie, where I continued sixe yeeres a Gally-slaue,

C finding

The miserable Captiuitie of finding in all this time much comfort and reliefe from English Marchants that were Protestants, and also from many English Masters and owners of Ships. But from English men being Papists none at all. The miserie of the Gallies doth surpasse any mans iudgement or imagination, neyther would any man thinke that such torture, or torment were vsed in the world, but onely they that feele it, the extremitie of miserie causeth many a slave to kill themselves, or else seeke to kill their Officers; but we were not suffered to haue so much as a knife about vs, yea if we had gotten one by any extraordinarie meanes, and offered any violence to any Officer, we should presently haue lost our nose and eares, and receiued a hundred blowes on our bare backe, and a hundred on our belly with a double rope, or a Bulls pisse, continuing a slave still: But I intreated the Almighty God to grant me grace that I might indure it patiently, that feeling that extremitie in bodie in this world, how farre would the torments of hell haue surpassed and exceeded it, if I had in this my earthly torture bene accessory to mine owne death, as many were. But at length God of his great goodnesse and mercy, deliuered me (according to my hope) in this manner. The great Duke fitted a ship, a Tartane and a Frigot, being very well appointed and victualled, disposing of them into the West Indies, and chiesely for the Riuer of the Amazons, appointing Captaine Robert Thornton, an Englishman, to be chiefe Commaunder of the Ship, the Tartane and the Frigot: so likewise was every other Officer appointed by the Duke himselfe; insomach as speaking of the placing of a Physitian, a Surgion, and a Surgions mate, Captaine Thornton standing by, said, your Highnesse may doe well to deliuer a poore Englishman that hath continued a great while in your Gallies: hee is well experimented in Physicke, and Surgery, by reason of his long practise both by Sea and Land: he is hardned to the Sea, and able to discharge the place better then the thre before mentioned: for in the Gallies he doth your Highnes but the labour of one slave: whereupon the Duke demaunded my name. Captaine Thornton answered, and said, William Davies: whereto the Duke replied, replied, I haue often bene spoken to for that fellow, whose liberty now I giue vpon thy good report, Thornton, but yet I doubt his vsage hath bene so hard in my Countrey, that as soone as he is out of chaynes, he will giue me the slip and not goe the voyage into the Indies with thee. But if he can giue five hundred Crownes securitie to goe the voyage, he shall be released presently out of chaynes: neyther shall he want any thing that is needfull for the voyage, for the good of all the Company, or for his owne bodie, and this let him vnderstand as soone as may be: which newes came within two dayes vnto me, to my great reioycing & comfort, but as soone as I heard it, I sodainly sate down, being at my old profession, carrying of durt, and stone, and such like in a basket, and would worke no longer, neyther suffer the slaue to worke that was chayned vnto mee, but as soone as I was espied, one of the Masters of the worke came to mee, and said thou Lutheran Dogge: Why workest thou not? and with that strake me with a Cudgell, whereto the slaue that was chayned with me, replied. The Duke hath giuen him his libertie: then said hee that had stroken mee, Master, I beseech you forgie mee, and excuse my rashnesse, doubting that I should haue remembered his former courtesies being at libertie. And within a short time after Captaine Thornton came from Florence to Ligorne, where I was, who then tolde mee the Dukes disposition to the full, and vpon what securitie I should be deliuered: which securitie I did sodainly procure by an English Marchant, whose name was Maister William Mellyn, of Bristow, who passed his Band for five hundred Crownes to the Duke, for the performance of the voyage by mee: Whereupon I was sodainly released out of chaynes, to my great reioycing, giuing God thanks for his blessings. Then was I presently well apparrelled by Captaine Thornton, and this Marchant, wanting nothing wherewith I was destitute: But within two or three dayes after I was sent for, by the great Duke, to come vnto him to Archemeyne, where then hee continued, whither sodainly I repayed, and comming to the Dukes presence,

William Dawies Barber-Surgion of Lonan.

The miserable Captiuitie of doing my dutie, he said vnto me, be of good comfort I haue giuen thee grace, with thy liberty, neyther shalt thou want any thing for the fitting of thy voyage, or needful for thy owne bodye, therefore speake boldly, and demaund any thing that shall be necessary, and I will haue thee well fitted: for the great Duke of Florence wants no money. Then he demaunded of me further what I was in mine owne Countrey, whether I was a Gentleman or no. I answered his highnesse I was: then he asked me how: I told him my father was a Gentleman, and for my part I had serued my Quene by Land and by Sea, against the aduersaries of my Quene and Countrey, and had lost mine owne blood, and spilt my enemies blood: and next that I was a Gentleman by Art. Then the Duke answered and said: Thou art a worthy fellow, for thou hast indured much miserie in this world. But tell me, quoth hee, with what substance of wealth camest thou out of thy Countrey: I answered with two purses full: Full said hee, of what: I said of Silver and Gold, which I lost when I was taken by his Highnes Gallies, and the other full of Patience, which doth continue full still: Then said the Duke to one that stood by, giue him a hundred Crownes to spend to strengthen himselfe, and bring himselfe to courage; thus did the Duke take delight in discoursing with me, in respect I spake the Italian tongue very perfectly, for I bought it deere, with many a droppe of my blood, in the time of my slauerie. Then receiuing this hundred Crownes, which the Duke had giuen me, I left his Court, comming presently to Ligorne, where the Ship lay, indeauoring of my selfe, by my labour, and industrie, for the fitting of all things necessary for the good of the Voyage, vpon the Dukes charge, besides this hundred Crownes: for they were giuen mee to spend at my owne pleasure, which I did, to the comfort of many English-men that lay in chaines, that were taken with mee: they wanted neyther meate nor drinke as long as my money lasted, as many of them as were left a liue, for of seven and thirtie of vs that were taken at the first, there remayned then but thirteene, whereof tenne continued in chaines, and two were deliuered with me. By this time all

William Davies Barber-Surgion of London.

all things were prepared and made readie for the performance of our pretended Voyage, now being bound to serue in the good Ship called the Santa Lucia, with a Frigot, and a Tartane, well victualled, and well manned, and chiefly bound to the Riuer of Amazones, with other severall Riuers, the which the Duke would haue inhabited, hoping for great stoze of gaine of Gold, but the Countries did afford no such thing, as hereafter shall be spoken of. Upon this Voyage we were foure teene moneths, making little gaine, or benefit for the Duke, for there was nothing to be gained. Now are we homewards bound, and recouering the Straits againe, & being within three or foure dayes sayle of our owne Port, Ligorne: in the night season we met with an English Pirate, who would haue taken vs, but was not able, yet held vs fight all the whole night, and kild vs a man, and hurt other two: whereof one was an Englishman, who died within two dayes after we recouered Ligorne, and being dead I went to the Captaine and demaunded of him where he should be buried, but he bad him goe aske of one father Sherwood an Englishman, so he told mee that if he were a Romane Catholike they would burie him in the Church, but if he were not, I should bury him out in the fields: But yet for my better assurance I went and asked of the Friers of the Misericordia, who also gaue their aduise, and counsell that he should be buried in the fields, because he was no Romane Catholike, whereupon I buried him in this manner.

I intreated the company of many Englishmen that were Protestants to helpe me to shroud him, and also to accompany me to the burying of him, which they did in this manner. We put him vpon a Beare, being shrowded with a covering ouer him, and carried by foure men, many Englishmen that were Protestants followed him, bearing euery man a branch of Rosemary in his hand to the place where we buried him, reading Prayers ouer him after the English manner. His name that was buried was Erasmus Lucas, and borne in Southwarke neere vnto London. Two daies being spent after his buriall, I was sought for by an Italian Fryer, who finding of me, demaunded

The miserable Captiuitie of

maunded of me my name, which presently I told him, then he replied, thou art he that I looke for, for thou hast buried a good Christian, and a Romane Catholike out in the fields, like to a Dog and a Lutheran as thou art thy selfe: therefore I charge thee in the Dukes name to goe along with mee, which command I durst not denie, but went with him, where he brought me before three or foure aged Friers of the Inquisition, & they asked of me whether I were that Lutheran that buried a good Christian in the fields, for he was a Romane Catholike, and confest, and receiued the Sacrament like to a good Christian, and therefore thou shalt be burned, for thou hast done contrary to the Law of Rome. I answered that I had buried a good Christian, but not a Romane Catholike, neither was he confest, nor receiued the Sacrament: they replied, if this be not true which thou hast said thou shalt surely die for it. Therefore take him, and put him into the secret, whither vnto I was brought, which is a prison in this manner: Many double lockes being opened, I passed through two or three outward prisons then coming to the doore of the secret, wherinto I was thrust, it was so darke that I could see no part of my body, then seeing round about me with my hands, I found it to be very short in length, & lesse in breadth, but of height I know not how high, because I could neither see nor seele the top. In this place I was almost ouer shoes in the filth of other men that had died there before, who neuer liued aboue eight or ten daies there at the most: Then wrapping one arme within another, and leaning against the wall, calling to minde Iobs miseries and Daniels afflictions amidst the Lions, and encouraging my selfe in Gods mercy, sung a Psalm very cheeresuliy to the praise and glory of God, wherein I was greatly comforted. Then did I draw off my shoes and stockings, & with my bare fete swept all the trash and filth into one corner. In this manner I liued fortie houres before any sleepe posselt me, and then being desirous of sleepe, I late downe and leaned my head against the wall, and slept very soundly, being altogether comforted with a liuely hope in the Almighty God, that he would deliuer me (according to my trust) as he had done before. And when most extremes would would oppress me, then would I be most ioyfull, finding al-wates an inward motion, saying, be of good comfort, the Lord will deliuer thee: In this manner I liued sixtene daies, my food being bread & water, and my lodging vpon the cold stones, and being yet alliue, they held it a miracle that I should liue there so long, saying, this Lutherane hath a Lions heart, for we neuer knew any to liue about ten daies, wherfore let vs haue him forth to be examined. Then was I brought before the high Inquisitioner, who demanded of me, whether he that I buried had receiued the Sacrament & confest, according to the Romane order or no, I answered no; he was a good Christian, but receiued not the Sacrament, nor was not confest, after the order of Rome:

William Davies Barber-Surgion of London.

then he said that he was, by a Frier of the Misericordia, & therefore thou shalt be burned. Then I intreated that I might but speake, and he said speake on: then I asked them this, whether the Frier that confest him could speake any English or no, he answered that he could speake none: then tell me quoth I, how an Italian Frier (can confesse an Englishman speaking no English), nor the Englishman speaking no Italian, nor other language but his mother tongue: for you know wel there must be no interpreter in confession, & if the Sacrament were ministered vnto him, the house where he died can iustifie it. Then the Inquis-itioner hearing this, scratched his head, saying, this fellow hath spoken the truth, wherfore take him and put him out into a large prison, whether I was brought, where I liued ten weeks being well, and often relieved by English Protestants, who reioyced much to see me alliue. These malicious Friers, there-reason wherfore they sought my life was, because they would haue the dead mans pay to themselves, which if he had bene a Roman Catholic had bin their due, & in respect he was not, they mist of the pay, & of their wicked pretence against me, (God I giue him thanks) by reason I could speake the Italian tongue, for if I had had an interpreter in this, though my cause was iust, yet I had surely died. Ten weeks being spent in this prison, it was the fortune of one M. Richard Row of Milbrooke, in the countie of Cornwel, to arriue at Ligorne, in the good ship called the Porcion
he being owner & Marchant of the said ship, & one day comming to

The miserable Captiuitie of

to the Prison grate demaunded of me what Countrey-man I was, I told him I was bozne in the Citie of Hereford. He asked my name: I answered William Dauies. Said he, know you one Master Dauies in Plymmouth. I said I was an vnfortunate brother of his. With that he was very sorely grieued, in respect he knew my brother very well, and loued him directly, and told me if all the meanes that he could vse could deliuer me, he would: therfore said he, thinke with your selfe, how I may deliuer you, and I will be backe againe with you within these two or thre houres: whereupon he deliuered me sixe Crownes, and bid me spare for no money, for he knew my brother would repay it againe: then leauing me, I late doune and leaned my head vpon my hand, setting my elbow vpon my knee, intreating my Almighty God, to shew me some direct course whereby I should be deliuered. Then presently came in to my head, to send for a Frenchman, in whose house I had alwaies layne before, who presently came vnto me, vnto whom I imparted my minde, telling of him that if he would faime a matter of debt against me, I would giue him ten Crownes for his labour, though I ought him nothing: but he answered and said it was dangerous, for it was a Gallie-matter, but I vowed it should neuer be made knowne by me: Whereupon he gaue consent, and went to the Governour and told him, that in the Prison where debtors are, there is an Englishman who oweth me money, and we were agreed, then said the Commissarie if thou art content, let him pay the charge of the house, and be gone: which charge I paid presently, and was freed, departing away with the Frenchman, and brought him to Master Hunts house, the English Counsell, where I gaue him his tenne Crownes. So leauing one another, I went presently aboard of Master Rowes Ship, being then bound for Naples, vnto which place we came, whose description followeth.

The Description and discouery of Naples.

Naples is a famous and most worthy Citie very spattous, standing close vpon the Sea, meruailous strongly fortified and planted with Ordnance, in many severall Castles, Bulwarks, Forts, and such like: Also to this Citie doth belong many Gallies, and very good shipping, and continually great store of shipping rides before it, this Citie lies in the Land of Calabria, and is gouerned by a Vice-Roy, vnder the King of Spayne: also there are many Souldiers in Garrison, being all Spaniards. The King of Spayne maintaynes many Partizners there. In this Citie they speake severall Christian languages, because there are of all Nations in Christendome, but principally Italians, and Spaniards. The Neopolitans are very proud, and of a loftie spirit, being for the most part very rich, and costly attired, and most commonly well furnished inwardly with their Countrey disease. They are altogether Papists, and their women very audacious, especially in the sinfull vse of their bodies, by reason they haue as well their pardon as priuiledge from Rome. In this Citie it is verie dangerous to walke by night, for a man may sodainly be kild for the cloathes on his backe, whether hee be poore or rich. In this place are alwaies great store of Marchants and Lidgers of severall Countries, as specially English, Dutch, Graekes, Italians, Venetians, French, Spaniard, Jew, with many other Christian Nations. The chiefe cominoditie that these Merchants deale in, is Raw Silke, or Silke wrought, eyther into Sattens, Taffeties, Programis, and diuers other silke stufes, Silke stockings, Laces of all sorts, & Garters of severall sorts. In this place I haue bene diuers times, and neuer found any thing note-worthy, but onely one, which was this. A mine vnderneath a great Mountaine about a mile or thereabouts in length. This vault was digged by the industrie of men for a passage from the Citie to an Island called Nisira, where all

Distant from England 700.
leagues.

The miserable Captiuitie of

Shipping doth stop before they come to the Citie; The reason wherefore this passage was inuented, is because the mountaine ouer it is so steepe that there was no passage ouer it, except they would goe twentie miles about, but now Coaches, Wagons Carts, horse or foote may passe as smoothly through as in a plaine way, continually hanging within it great store of Lampes: this vault is in height about fise sadame, and foure in breadth, it is named the Grot, & by common report one Virgil a learned man was the Authoz of it, whose Tombe is aloft in each end of it, hauing a Lampe hanging continually before it: Through this place I haue oft and many times passed: and therefore vpon my owne knowledge I can assure what I haue written.

V.

The Description and discouery of the Riuer of Amazons.

Distant from England 1600
leagues.

The Riuer of the Amazons lieth in the highest part of the West Indies, beyond the Equinoctiall line; to fall with this Riuer fortie leagues from Land you shall haue eight, fixe, and seauen sadome water, and you shall see the Sea change to a ruddie colour, the water shall grow fresh, by these signes you may run in boldly your course, and comming nere the Riuers mouth, the depth of your water shall increase, then you shall make discouery of the trees before the land, by reason the land is very low, and not higher in one place then another three or foure, being at a spring tide almost all ouerflowne, God knowes how many hundred leagues. It flowes much water there with a very forcible tide. In this Riuer I continued ten weekes, seeing the fashion of the people and countrey there: This Countrey is altogether full of woods, with all sorts of wilde beasts, as Lions, Beares, Molues, Leopards, Babones, strange Bores, Apes, Monkeys, Martyns, Sanguins, Martlets, with diuers other strange beasts: also these woods are full of wilde fowls of all sorts, and Parats more plentiful then Pigeons in England, and as good meat, for I haue often eaten eaten of them. Also this Countrey is very full of Rivers, having a King over every River. In this place is continuall tempests as lightning, thunder, and rayne, and so extreame, that it continues most commonly sixtēne or eightēne houres in foure and twentie. There are many standing waters in this Countrey, which be full of Aligators, Guianes, with many other severall water Serpents, and great store of fresh fish, of strange fashions. This Countrey is full of Muskitas, which is a small Flie, which much offends a stranger coming newly into the Countrey. The manner, fashion, and nature of the people is this: They are altogether naked, both men and women, having not so much as one threed about them to cover any part of their nakednesse, the man taketh a round Cane as big as a penny candle, and two inches in length, through the which he puls the fore skin of his yard, tying the skin with a peece of the rinde of a tree about the bignesse of a small packethreed, then making of it fast about his middle, he continueth thus till he have occasion to vse him. In each eare he weareth a Reed or Cane, which he bores through it, about the bignesse of a Swans quill, and in length halfe an inch, and the like through the midst of the lower lip: also at the bidge of the nose he hangs in a Reed a small glasse Bead or Button, which hanging directly afoze his mouth, lies to and fro still as he speaks, wherein he takes great pride and pleasure. He weares his hayre long, being rounded below to the nether part of his eare, and cut short, or rather as I indged pluckt bald on the crowne like a Frier. But their women vse no fashion at all to set forth themselves, but warke naked as they were borne, with haire long of their heads, also their breasts hang very low, by reason they are never laced or braced up: they do vse to annoynt their bodies, both men and women, with a kinde of red earth, because the Muskitas or Flies shal not offend them. These people are very ingenious, craftie, and treacherous, very light of soote, and good Bowemen, whose like I haue neuer scene, for they doe ordinarily kill their owne foode, as Beasts, Fowle, and Fish, the manner of their Bow and Arrowes is this. The Bow is about two yards in length, the Arrow seauen foot. His

William Davies Barber-Surgion of London.

The miserable Captiuitie of

Boowe is made of Brazill wood very curious, his string of the rinde of a Tree, lying close to the Bow, without any bent, his Arrow made of a Reed, and the head of it is a fish bone, hee kills a beast in this manner: standing behinde a Tree, hee takes his marke at the beast, and wounding him, he followes him like a Bloud-hound till he fall, oftentimes seconding his shote: then for any fowle be he neuer so little, he neuer misses him: as for the fish, he walks by the water side, and when he hath spied a fish in the water, he presently strikes him with his Arrow, and sodainly throwing downe his Bow, he leaps into the water, swimming to his Arrow which he dzawes a-land with the fish fastned to it, then hauing each kild his owne food, as well flesh, and fowle, as fish, they meet together, to the number of fiftie or sixtie in a company, then make a fire after this fashion: They take two sticke of wood, rubbing one hard against another, till such time as they be fired, then making of a great fire euery man is his owne Cooke to broyle that which he hath gotten, and thus they feede without Bread or Salt, or any kinde of drinke but Water and Tobacco, neither doe they know what it meanes: In these Countries we could finde neither Gold nor Silver Ore, but great store of Hennes. For I haue bought a couple for a Jewes Harpe, when they would refuse ten shillings in money. This Countrey is full of delicious fruit, as Pynes, Plantins, Guaves, and Potato rootes, of which fruits and rootes I would haue bought a mans burthen for a glasse Button or Bead. The manner of their lodging is this: they haue a kinde of net made of the rinde of a Tree which they call Hamac, being three fadome in length, and two in breadth, and gathered at both ends at length, then fastning epyther end to a Tree, to the full length about a yard and halfe from the ground, when he hath desire to sleepe, hee creepes vnto it. The King of euery Riuer is knowne by this manner. He wearres vpon his head a Crowne of Parats feathers, of severall colours, hauing cyther about his middle, or about his necke, a chaine of Lyons teeth or clawes, or of some other strange beast, hauing a wooden sword in his hand, and hereby is he knowne to be the King: Oftentimes one King warres warres against another in their Canowes, which are Boats cut out of a whole Tree, and sometimes taking one another the Conquerers eats the Captiues. By this time ten weeks were spent, and being homewards bound, but not the same way that we came, for we sayled vnto the Riuer before the winde, because it blowes there continually one way, which forces all ships that come thither to returne by a contrary way.

William Dauies Barber-Surgion of London.

V-II.

The Description and discovery of Malta.

Malta is a small Island, very famous, hauing two Cities vpon it called Terra-noua, and Terra-vecha being scituate very neere one another. This Island is gouerned by a great Master, who acknowledgeth no Superiour vpon earth, but the Pope to be Supream head of the Church. The great Master liues in Terra-noua, which is a great Citie, lying close vpon the Sea, marueilous strongly fortified and planted with Ordnance the like is not in Christendom, for the Turke hath oftentimes sought to take it, with two or three hundred sayle of Gallies at a time, but yet was neuer able to take any part of it. To this Island doth there belong Gallies, though they be but few, to the number of sixe or eight sayle, and also shipping, where with they doe much offend the Turke, taking of them very often, and making them slaues: In this Island they hold the Romish Religion, both men and women, their women are altogether lasciuious and lewdly giuen, but there men are valiant, Gentlemen, and worthy men at armes: they are of all Nations of Christendome, speaking generally all languages, also they haue an ancient order of Knighthood, sworne by the Crosse of Saint Iohn, which is a forked white Crosse which they weare vpon their breasts to be knowne to be Cavaliers and Knights of Malta. The manner of their Oath of Knighthood is this: that they shall neuer marry, by reason they shall neuer haue Childzen legitimate: for there are many Lords

Distant from England 700
leagues.

The miserable Captiuitie of

and Nobles men sent thither by their Uncles to be knighted, because they shall neuer marry, whereby after his death his lands shall come to his Uncles issue, yet they are suffered to haue as many whores as they will. Another part of their oath is this. A Knight of Malta is sworne not to stand in place where two, thre, or foure are vpon one in fight, but to take the weaker part, & to fight to the last. They are all of bold courage, being to the number of five thousand or thereabouts, in Malta and other Christian places: another part of their oaths is this, by Land or Sea, whether it be in ship or Gally, they are sworne to encounter their aduersaries, though they be thre to one, and neuer to yeeld or slip away, for they are sworne to fight it to the last mans death: The which oath they performe very courageously, for they are Gentlemen of very great respect, neither will they ever fall out amongst themselves, being forbidden by another part of their oath. As for their maintenance, the poorer sort haue a pension from the great master, which maintains him very gallant, and the richer sort liue vpon their owne charge. One thing there is strange in that Island, those that are borne without the cities speak altogether the Morisco tongue, being altogether like Mozes. This Island is very plentiful and fruitfull of all things, especially, Wine, Cozne, Fish, Flesh, and Fruits. These knights are very mercifull, hauing their aduersaries prostrate, greatly regarding their Oath.

---

VIII.

The Description and discouery of Cyprus.

Distant from England 1000.
leagues.

CYprus is a famous Island of the Turks, hauing two Cities and many Townes vpon it; The chiefest Citie vpon it is Famagosta: this Citie lies close vpon the Sea, in low ground, being very strongly fortified & walled about, and gouerned by Turkes, holding their owne Religion, believing and confessing God the Father, and their Prophet Mahomet, doing all things contrary to a Christian, yet though they doe not acknowledge Christ to be the Son of God, and a God, yet they say he is the breath

William Davies Barber-Surgion of London.

breath of God, and by the Jewes put to death, but they doe not beleeue that he is risen again. They hate a Jew about any nation even as they do the diuel, neither do they care to kill him, no more then they doe a dog, oftentimes killing them in the very Streets upon the least occasion, if it be but for touching his garment as he passeth by him: yet their liues many Jewes in all parts of the Turkes dominions, but in this manner. They will suffer neither man, woman, nor childe to plucke vp their shoes on their heele, if they be Jewes, but goe alwaies slipshod and barelegd, wearing a blacke cap vpon his head, and carrying of a buckram sack vpon his shoulders empty, to shew that he is a Jew, & a slave to the world. In this Island of Cyprus, without the Cities and Towns, the Countrey is inhabited by Greeks, liuing vassals to the Turke, paying to the Turke the tenth of all that they possesse, even to the tenth of their children, if they amount to that number, and that tenth childe is Circumciled and made a Turke, receiuing an Osper a day from the great Turke for the first yeeres, and for the second two, and for the third three, per diem, and so his pay increaseth an Osper yeerely as he groweth in yeeres, for he is chosen from his infancy to be a Souldier of the great Turkes, and so shall all his male children receiue the like pay, and be Souldiers to the Turke: their garments being welted about the necke with a welt of purple silk, wherby they are known from others. This Osper is the eleuenth of a shilling English. So that at twentieth yeeres of age he serues in the field, his pay being worth ninteen pence a day, and so increasing with his yeeres. This Island of Cyprus is very fruitfull, having great store of silke woymes, which yeeldeth them abundance of Silke. Also this Island yeelds great store of fruits of all sorts, and store of Cattell of all sorts: Three sorts of Beasts this Island yeeldes, which differ farre from ours in England, that is to say, a Buffella differs from an Ore, their Cammels from our Horses, and their Sheepe from ours. The Buffella is a Beast after the manner of an Ore, but that hee is bigger, and not so high, nor so long as the tallest of our Oren, yet one of them is as strong as three of our Oren, for two of them doe the labour of sixe Oxen : their hoznes are flat, and at mid-day when they vse to rest them, they take them, and turne them into a water, where they will stand for the space of two houres couered quite ouer the backes in water, then will they yoke them and worke them as fresh till night, as they did in the Morning, without any bayting at all. Their Cammels is a meruailous tall beast, hauing a necke twice as long as a Horse, and a great bunch growing about the middle of his backe, as bigge as a pecke, his is clouen footed, and his tayle little, and for his strength he will carry as much on his backe as foure hozses, and continue with his carriage on his backe threescore houres without meat or rest. I haue sene foure thousand of them laden at one time with Merchandise going a very slow pace, and nothing so fast as a Carriers horse, yet will they continue that pace two dayes and two nights together, without any eating or drinking: and when they doe rest and sãde, it is but slender and verie little, in this manner: when they come to their resting place they lye downe with their lading vpon their backes. Then the Mozes or Turkes, put a Ball made of Date stones beaten, into euery one of their mouthes, the powder of the stones being compounded with Linseed Oyle, and the white of Egges, which makes the Balls as hard as Stones, and thus they will liue and continue their trauaile sixteene dayes and nights together, receiuing the said rest and reliefe at euery two dayes end. Their Sheepe are twice as bigge as ours in England, but in all fashions like our Sheepe, except the tayle, for their tayles are meruailous great, broad, and thicke, being very fat, for I haue weighed many of their tayles flayed from the Butchers, and they haue waighed ten, eleuen, and twelue pound waight, and throughout all Barbarie and Turkie, they haue plenty of these beasts, and also all kind of beasts that we haue in England. There liue many Greekes in all parts throughout the Turkes Dominions, but in great bondage and pouertie: they are good Christians, abhorring the Idolatry of Rome, and obseruing the same computation for Christmasse and other festiualls, that we doe in England.

The miserable Captiuitie of

Also

William Davies Barber-Surgion of London.

Also there are Jewes in all parts of Turkie and Barbary, and all parts of Christendome, England excepted: yet though they be thus dispersed throughout most parts of the world, living in extreame slavery, yet shall you not see one Jew begge his bread. One thing I have greatly marvelled at, that a Jew is respected more in Christendome, then with the Turks: for the Turks (as you have heard) detests him about any Nation, tying him to a notable and knowne marke, or manner of apparrell, and yeelding him no Law or right, eyther against Turke or Christian: whereas, contrarywise, in Christendome, he is tyed to no manner of weare, but may goe in what shape he lists: and for Law, by reason of his wealth, hee shall sooner have right done to him then a Christian: wherefore in my minde, the Turke greatly in this condemnes the Popish Christian: for it is an ordinary saying with them, that if a Jew had put Mahomet to death, nay, but touched the hem of his garment violently, they would not have left one of the race of them alive, nor yet any thing, or building unraced, that might procure their memozy. But in Christendome they are suffered to build Sinagogues, and to vse their Religion publicly. But I beseech the Almighty God that this our Land of England may neuer be defiled, eyther by Pope, Turke, or Jew.

IX.

The Description and discovery of Sicillia.

Sicillia is a famous Iland of the Spaniards, having many Swoorthie Cities vpon it. This Iland is in bignesse seauen hundred miles about, very fruttfull, and plentifull of all things, as Silke, Flesh, and Fish, Corne, Wine, and Oyle, with great store of Fruit. This Iland is gouerned by a Viceroy, vnder the King of Spaine: his chiefe abiding is at Palermo.
or Mercina, two famous Cities, but his chiefe residence is at Palermo. This City lyeth in low ground, having a Moun-taine nere it, called Monta Pellagrunc. This Citie is very populous,

Distant from England 650.
leagues.

The miserable Captiuitie of

populous, being rich of Marchandize and wealthy Marchants. At this Citie I haue bene very often in the time of my sla- uerie in the Dukes Gallies. Also, nere this Citie there is a Towne called Trappany, in which Towne there is a Mona- starie, wherem they affirme that the Pillar of Salt that Lots Wife was turned vnto, comming out of Sodome is. They professe the Romish Religion throught this Iland both Men and Women, speaking the Italian tongue generally, as many as be borne in the Iland, and are called Sicillians. Mercina being another famous Citie, lyeth close vpon the Sea, and is situated vpon high ground, vnder the foote of a great Mountayne. This City is strongly fortified and planted with Ordnance: also there is great store of Gallies and Shipping belonging to this place, which both much offend the Turke, but chiefly they are employed in Marchandize. This high Mountayne that hangs ouer the Citie is called Mungebella, and standeth in the East-part of this Iland, the top of it burn- ing continually both night and day; and by reason of the fiercenesse of the fire, hath consumed many Villages. The rea- son of this fire is a Brimstone, or a Sulphure Mine, which be- ing high, is (as all men imagine) set a fire by the heate of the Sunne, as the Iland Strambula is, which continually burneth: and many other high places more that I haue seene, as Mount Etna, the pike of Teneriffe a Southward Iland, and many others, &c.

Vnto this Citie Mercina belongs a straight entrance by Sea, commonly called the Gale of Mercina. it lyeth betwixt the Land of Sicillia and Calabria, very dangerous to passe through for any Ship, except they are very well experimented. For my part I know this place well, being often there in the time of my slaerie.

X.

The Description and discouery of Maggadore.

Distant from England 460
leagues.

Maggadore is an Iland of the Mores, and lyeth nere the Land of Barbary, without the Straights, not farre from
the

William Dauies Barber-Surgion of London.

the Lands of the Kings of Fesse and Morrocco. This Island is not inhabited, but very barren, being all Rocks by the Sea side, and very smoothe on the top, and full of bushes, whereunto Pidgeons doe breede in great store: We held it nothing to goe sixe or eight in company together into the Island, and bring, in the space of thre houres, twentie dozens of Pidgeons aboard with vs. Betwixt the Main and this Island there is very good riding for a Shippe. Also, the Moyses will bring out of the Main Land such Victuals as they haue to relieue our wants, as Mutton, Beefe, &c. The Moyses of this Countrey are very deceitfull and trecherous: their cloathing is but very naked and thinne, for they weare but one flat of thinne Flanell, wherewith they couer their breasts, backs, and priuie parts; and as for their armes, legs, and thighes, they goe naked of them: the sayd Garment, or piece of Flanell, they call a Barnose. In this Countrey of Barbary there is great store of Sugar-canes, and Sugar made, as they in Brazil. Sometimes in this Countrey there is Amber-grease found, but the cunning of the Moyses makes a great deale counterfaite. I came to this Island in a Caruell of Plymouth, Master Edward Decon of the saide Colone being Master of her: Moyses coming oftentimes aboard of vs, where they were kindly entertained; but they returned our kindnesse in this manner: Setting of the chiefest, with many more of them ashore in our Boate, wherein sixe English men rowed them ashore; they being all a Land, our Boate was aground, then one of our men kept out of the Boate, by to the knees in water, and by strength would haue set the Boate off from the Land, which as soon as they espyed him out of the Boate, they toke hold of him, and drew him a Land, where they cut all his cloathes off his backe, and deuided them in peeces amongst them, carrying the man starke naked by into the Countrey, saying that we should neuer haue him againe except they had twentie French Crownes for his ransome, which newes the Boate brought presently aboard, (which being in vaine to striue with them) we gaue them, and receiued the man naked, having no further dealing with them.

The miserable Captiuitie of ## XI.

The Description and discouery of Candy.

Distant from England 900.
leagues.

Candy is a famous Iland of the Venetians, very fruitful, yielding great store of Wine and Oyle, and all other things plentiful. This Iland is very high and long, poynting East and West: the North-side of it very pleasant, with great store of Gardens and Vineyards, and such like: but very barren to the Southward-side, with great Rocks, Cliffs, and Mountaynes, which part is inhabited by poore Greekes: and also there are many small Ilands vnder these Cliffs, inhabited likewise by Greekes, as Christiana and Godza, with others moze. These Greekes liue all together in bondage to the Venetians. The North-side of this Iland is inhabited by Italians, and some Jewes. There are two very fayre Cities: (viz.) Candia, and Acony, these Cities are inhabited most with Venetians, strongly fortified and planted with Ordnance. These Cities lye right against the entring of the Arches of Appellican, which goeth to Constantinople, where the Great Turke continues, receiuing tribute of the Duke of Venice for this Iland, and other parts, for the Venetian is tributary to the Great Turke. Also the Great Turke keeps him in subiection by Land and Sea, neither dare the Venetian toyne their forces with any Christian, at any time whensoeuer a flecte of Gallies and Shippes is set forth against the Turke. yet the Duke of Venice hath twice as many Gallies as any Christian Prince whatsoeuer, which he doth employ, some of them in Marchandize, hauing continuall trading both with Christian and Turke, and some of his Gallies continually lieth about the entring of the Gulph of Venice, about the Iland of Zant and Saphlany, and the small Iland of the Sirauals, and nere about Madona: these parts doe they defend from any Christian men of warre, or Christian Gallies, or eyther Gallies or Briggantens of the Turkes that shall approach nere vnto these parts, in the manner and fashion of men:

William Dauies Barber-Surgion of London.

men of Warre: and oftentimes the sayd Gallies doe take both Christian and Turke, making Slaves of the men, or else chopping off of their heads; for it is lawfull for him so to doe, by the conclusion betwixt Him, the Christian, and Turke, taking them within twentie leagues compasse of the entrance of his Gulph, but not in any other part of the Sea, without the said compasse.

XII.

The Description of Morria.

MORRIA is a small low Island, lying in the River of Amazons, the highest part of the West Indies. This Island is altogether inhabited by Women, having no Man-kinde amongst them: they goe altogether naked, vsing Bow and Arrows for the killing of their owne foode: the haire of their heads is long, and their Breests hang low: and whereas many here in England doe imagine that they haue the right Breast seared, or cut off, it is no such matter as now, what hath bene in times past I know not: for this of mine owne knowledge, I haue scene fortie, fiftie, or threescore of them together, each of them bearing Bow and Arrows in their hands, going along by the Sea side; and when they espyed a Fish, they shote at it, and strike it, and so throwing downe their Bowes, they leap into the water after their Arrows; and bring the Fish aland, fastned to the Arrow: and so in all other things, as well the dressing of their meate, as their lodging and customes, they resemble and imitate the Indians of the River of Amazons, as you heard befoze in that discourse. But some of these Women doe vse to beare their Children vpon their backs, in this manner: They take a piece of the rinde of a Tree, and with the one end thereof they fasten the Childes hammes, and about the arme-pits and Shoulders with the other, and so hang him on their backs like a Tinkers Budget, and call vp the breast to him ouer the shoulder. The reason wherefoze this Island is inhabited by Women onely, is this:

Distant from England 1620.
leagues.

The miserable captiuitie of

One Moneth in the yere, the Men from each side of the Maine Land comes in their Canoes, ouer to the Iland, euery Man matching himselfe with a Woman, living there a Mo-neth: and what men Childzen they finde there, they carry away with them; and the Woman Childzen they leaue behinde with the Mothers. And this is their vs once a yere, whereby this Iland is altogether inhabited by Women. There is one thing moze to be wondred at, that I haue also siene, that is to say, very good Oysters and Muscles growing vpon trees, for I haue eaten my part of many an hundred of them. And for your better vnderstanding how they grow, you shall know that the Trees stand nere the Sea side, and at euery full tyde
the bowes hang into the Sea a sadome, or a sadome and a halfe, so that when the tyde goeth out, they are found hanging in great clusters vpon the branches, like Barnacles to the side of a ship, and at the comming in of the tyde, they receiue their moysture.

FINIS.

Dunst
T. A. T. A.

