

Empowering Stage Directors and Choreographers Research Study

SDC and SDCF are embarking on a research study entitled Empowering Stage Directors and Choreographers: Investigating, Articulating, and Enhancing the Livelihood of Theatrical Leaders.

This project is designed to gain a baseline understanding of how directors and choreographers survive or struggle in today's ecosystem, as well as an understanding of the resources that are currently available to them in the various stages of their careers. This data will be used to inform and evaluate SDC / SDCF's priorities and strategies as well as to develop new programs, in collaboration with community stakeholders, to strengthen the professional welfare and status of directors, choreographers, and the field.

This study is made possible with support from New York State Council on the Arts and NYC Mayor's Office of Media and Entertainment, and we have engaged The Network for Culture & Arts Policy (NCAP) to lead the study.

This survey is designed for SDC Members; Associate Members are not eligible to participate.
