Ready today for tomorrow

JCU's Master of International Tourism and Hospitality Management (MITHM) is supported by high-profile industry, government and NGO partners who stand ready to provide you with work-integrated learning opportunities and are eager to hire JCU graduates.

Our industry, government and NGO connections offer a wide range of internship opportunities that will equip you for the career niche of your choice, whether that's at policy, governance, management or operational level in a government department, hotel, resort, tour operation, convention centre, destination marketing or management organisations.

Our staff are all closely involved in applied projects with a range of different tourism organisations, and linked to international associations focussed on sustainable tourism development and education. It's yet another way JCU ensures its graduates are job-ready.

As a MITHM student, you will learn from expert lecturers who are leaders in their fields, and focus on sustainability, innovation, resilience to overcome adversity, and effective leadership. You will also have the opportunity to liaise directly with industry to identify issues to be investigated for real-world research projects, providing data and analysis that will assist in future planning as well as growing your professional

We work closely with industry to provide opportunities for you to develop transferrable skills that employers are seeking, such as communication, teamwork, leadership and problem-solving.

"I truly value the MITHM course. As a student from Africa, the course material has been delivered in an engaging way that aligns with my learning style. This approach has fostered a comfortable learning environment for me. I appreciate the balance between theory and handson experience, such as engaging field trips, which enhances my understanding of tourism here in Far North Queensland significantly. This course is equipping me with invaluable knowledge for my future career, ensuring I'm well-prepared to excel in my industry. I believe this exposure will open doors to promising job opportunities and facilitate my growth within the field."
