This is the account of an antivax misinformation film by Andrew Wakefield. The baseless theory that vaccines cause autism was promoted most prominently by a since-retracted 1998 study by Wakefield in the medical journal The Lancet. The study sought to establish a connection between the Measles, Mumps, and Rubella (MMR) vaccine and autism. The Lancet study was retracted in 2010 after the British Medical Journal found what it described as “several elements of incorrect information.”

The Wakefield study, which only involved 12 participants, has been refuted by numerous studies since it was published. For example, the CDC states on its website, “There is no link between vaccines and autism,” citing multiple peer-reviewed studies. Wakefield was barred from practicing medicine in the U.K. in 2010.

The account also shares links to other antivax misinformation films, such as ‘Medical Racism’, produced by Robert F. Kennedy Jr.’s antivax nonprofit Children’s Health Defense.

What do you need before you can effectively roll out a central bank digital currency?

Distribution and a secure, verified ID tied to each wallet.

That happens to be a natural by product of "vaccine passports".

According to Vaxxter's Facebook page, the site is owned by Dr. Sherri Tenpenny, an Ohio-based physician, through Choonadi, LLC, although this is not disclosed on the site. Tenpenny is a notable figure in the anti-vaccination movement, having published several books and frequently lecturing on the subject.

Vaxxter.com derives revenue from advertisements, affiliate marketing, and reader donations. The site also directs readers to "Dr. Tenpenny's Store," an e-commerce site selling supplements and anti-vaccine books.

This report was produced using two proprietary datasets from NewsGuard.

The Misinformation Fingerprints dataset, a catalogue of data about top misinformation narratives, contains related keywords and search terms for all of the top misinformation and disinformation narratives spreading online--produced using human intelligence but designed for use with AI/ML/NLP tools to identify content matching specific false claims. NewsGuard analysts used the Misinformation Fingerprints dataset to identify relevant searches related to misinformation narratives about COVID-19 and other topics.

The second dataset used was the News Website Reliability Ratings, which consists of credibility ratings for over 6,000 news and information websites that account for 95% of online engagement with news in the U.S., U.K., France, Germany and Italy. Each site's rating is based on nine basic, apolitical journalistic criteria. Based on the criteria, each site receives an overall designation of green (generally trustworthy) or red (generally not trustworthy) and a trust score of 0-100. NewsGuard's analyst used the News Website Reliability Ratings dataset to identify misinformation sources that appeared in the results for searches conducted as part of the analysis.

For the purposes of this analysis, we focused on searches for which the searcher's intent could reasonably have been to search for accurate information about a topic. The analysis used the same searches across all search engines analysed to ensure parity. Examples selected for the report represent an illustrative, but by no means exhaustive, list of search results that contain misinformation sources. Both the Misinformation Fingerprints and the News Website Reliability Index are available to be licensed for research and other purposes.
