Dear Friends,

As I write this letter, summer is coming to a close and we, at NJPSA/FEA, are filled with the excitement of new beginnings that September always brings.

Recently, I've begun filling my "commute-to-work" time with podcasts and one with an intriguing title popped up on my phone the other day — "Is Your 'Leadership' Messy Enough?" What a captivating concept! Those of us in leadership know how messy leadership can be, particularly since it is complex, demanding and deeply grounded in the many relationships — students, teachers, families — across a school building. In this podcast, based on the work of Alyssa Gallagher and Rosie Connor, authors of Embracing MESSY Leadership: How the Experience of 20,000 School Leaders Can Transform You and Your School, the authors provide a leadership model using MESSY as an acronym and they highlight several key messages that resonate at the beginning of the school year. One of these messages emphasizes the need to balance instructional leadership with transformational leadership, defined as the inspirational and relational side of leadership. A second message is to slow down — to pause and reflect — to adjust approaches, mindsets, and perspectives as needed and model what a lead learner looks like.

So as a new school year begins, I encourage each of us to embrace the messiness of leadership and focus on the relationships that are at the heart of who we are and what we do each and every day. Know that NJPSA/FEA is here to support you on this journey as you consider ways to deepen your professional knowledge, improve your skills, strengthen your teams, and build your leadership pipeline.

leadership skills can be applied universally, educators know differently! Every level of the PreK - 12 continu-when administrators move between grade spans it is often without the support of a mentor and with others assuming you know exactly what to do as a leader

A school's culture and climate are important factors in the success of the entire school community. Every aspect of the school is reliant upon its functionality. When schools are not functioning properly, when student achievement is low or when people are not happy, the climate of the school comes under fire along with the school's leaders. Over the past 20 years, the importance of establishing or maintaining a positive, inclusive climate has been thrust to the top of the list of 'how to become an effective school.' School leaders are faced with complaints from their school community regarding climate issues and have therefore, become more astute to the changes in climate, But, is the principal solely responsible for the climate?

You will also hear from the Hamilton Township (Mercer County) teams and their NJPSA/FEA coaches who have worked on reducing their chronic absentee rates for the past six years. With a concerted district wide team-based approach following the pandemic, they saw their attendance rates soar and the Chronic Absentee rates drop below the state average and in many cases into the single digits. With ongoing coaching, professional learning opportunities and a laser focus they demonstrated success. This was a significant achievement in a school district that has both a large transient immigrant population and significant levels of poverty.

Creating and facilitating meetings is an ever-present and essential part of school leadership. Educational leaders utilize meeting time to achieve organizational goals, problem-solve, solicit ideas, as well as gather and disseminate information. Leaders strive to make meeting time valuable and effective. As proof, a Google search for: 'first staff meeting of the school year' will yield (about 957,000,000 results in 0.48 seconds). Despite a desire to improve meetings, research shows that many participants view meetings as unproductive and inefficient. This workshop will explore how to implement practices and protocols that will transform meetings from passive and mundane to interactive, dynamic opportunities that will increase participation, purpose, collaboration and learning.

If you've ever applied for a major grant, there are plenty of parameters but seldom any useful advice. And when you don't get the grant, you have no idea why. Yet millions of dollars in education grants are awarded every year to those who know how to articulate their needs the right way. The facilitator, a former teacher, principal, and district administrator, has won millions of dollars in grants and has taught others how to succeed in their funding efforts. In this workshop, we'll discuss sources of grants, which initiatives are best funded by grants, and the benefits, limitations, and sustainability of programs funded by grants.

★🔗 Gender Identity and Transgender Student Issues

Zoom

Dec. 3, 2024; 9 am - 3 pm

Presenters: David Nash, Esq., Director of Legal Education and National Outreach; Robyn Gigl, Esq., Partner at Dilworth, Paxson, LLP

Fee: $125 Members/$150 Non-Members

The risk of homelessness, substance abuse, suicidal ideation and other adverse outcomes is exponentially higher for our transgender students. Fortunately, New Jersey has become a national leader in supporting the needs of our transgender students and in addressing issues of gender identity in our curriculum, K-12. With the enactment of P.L. 2021, c.32, New Jersey has expanded its commitment to addressing issues of gender identity and other aspects of promoting diversity, equity and inclusion at all grade levels. Unfortunately, our public schools in New Jersey and across the nation are facing significant pushback from some groups who either misunderstand our current requirements or raise moral or religious objections to New Jersey law and attempt to have their child(ren) opt out of this requirement.

In this session, participants will learn about:

- The legal requirements and latest guidance from the NJDOE related to supporting transgender students;
- The specific curriculum requirements that must be addressed under P.L. 2021, Chapter 32;
- The foreseeable legal issues that should be planned for related to addressing gender identity in the curriculum;
- Guidance for responding to objections from parents, students, staff, and political leaders; and
- Sample scenarios, talking points and other tools for responding to the misperceptions of parents, students and even some staff members regarding gender identity, curriculum and related legal obligations.

Participants will also learn about recent Supreme Court decisions, revised Title IX regulations, and the latest on legal actions brought by New Jersey's Attorney General regarding school district obligations to support transgender students.

The speaking and writing sections of our ACCESS scores are consistently the lowest of the four domains. So, how do we design an instructional environment that allows our teachers to get our students talking and writing more? This is a workshop model session for instructional leaders, including content supervisors (not just the ML Supervisor!) that requires active participation as we look at standards, curriculum, and strategies that you can use to lead your departments in engaging students at all proficiency levels.

During this session, instructional leaders will evaluate elements of their own curriculum through a culturally and linguistically responsive lens utilizing the WIDA English Language Development Standards. We will be looking for and/or creating explicit opportunities for speaking and writing development, and also engaging in a variety of instructional strategies intended to develop students' speaking and writing skills.

How are you listening to the collective voices in your school? What do YOU, as the instructional leader, hear and what actions do you take based upon the stories emerging? Explore strategies to amplify the voices of students, teachers, and administrators to foster a sense of autonomy, efficacy, collaboration, and engagement. Discover the profound benefits of nurturing agency, from enhanced student motivation and academic success to strengthened school culture and community relationships. As a result of this learning experience, you will have the strategies to answer these questions:

- What is agency and how is it cultivated in the school and classroom?
- How are we listening and using the stories that exist in the school environment to create the actions that will serve the community of learners?

FEA's Online Learning Suite provides a host of professional learning courses designed to further your growth as educational leaders. These asynchronous courses are taught by the very best experts and foremost practitioners on these critical and timely topics. You have the flexibility to take the course wherever and whenever you choose and to focus more time on the aspects of the course that are most relevant to you. The FEA Online Learning Suite is also an excellent tool for schools and districts to use on professional development days or as part of an in-district program designed by FEA.

Assessment Literacy and the Power of Formative Assessment

This course which was co-developed by FEA and ETS consists of five Assessment Literacy modules that are intended to help teachers develop and deepen their assessment literacy and understanding of the components of a balanced assessment system. Each module uses a combination of readings, case studies, and discussion questions. We hope that teachers will be able to work with colleagues in their schools, in a learning community, or in a department- or grade-level team to talk about reactions to the activities; however, we also provide additional resources in the appendices for independent use if collaboration is not available.

Culturally Responsive Practices and Leadership

Culturally Responsive Practices requires educators to recognize and redress traditional psycho-social barriers to learning, barriers that have impeded the emergence of Black and Brown students as independent learners. In pursuing this journey, they emerge as culturally literate practitioners and allies who are better able to close the learning gaps currently supported by status-quo instruction and leadership. In recognition of the complexity of having race talks, we are excited to extend the learning by offering a 90 minute, synchronous session, led by course instructor Dr. Robin Harden Daniels. ($125. Estimated 5.5 hours, including synchronous component)

Fighting Racial Slurs and Other Common Acts of Student Aggression

American society has become increasingly more violent as rules of civility and mutual respect are treated as signs of weakness. Unbridled expressions of racial violence and political polarization places those in historically targeted populations at even greater risk than ever before. This course discusses how race-based bullying is deeply grained in a discriminatory cultural narrative and what constructive behaviors can be taken to disrupt its expression in our schools.

Mentoring as a Partnership: Navigating the Learning

As novice teachers enter the profession, mentors and district and school leaders are critical players in the first year journey. They have the ability to be change makers in building a system that supports learning and continuous improvement of practice. This session will provide mentors and those who train mentors with a robust set of resources and strategies to strengthen their knowledge and skills to support mentors as key team members in the induction process.

Take advantage of the “FEA Professional Learning Savings Account,” which can save districts substantial money and make the Board approval process much simpler. A description of this plan follows below:

- The FEA Professional Learning Savings Account will function like a prepaid debit card, which you can use for FEA/LEGAL ONE professional learning services.
- A district can fund a $5,000 account and receive 10% off in-district programs and 10% off FEA coaching services. Plus all non-NJPSA members will pay member prices for all professional learning sessions in which attendees register through FEA. Higher levels are available for more savings.
- You may use the code all year until you spend the full amount of your account. This program will begin on September 1, 2024 and will end on August 31, 2025.

Healing Centered Engagement (HCE)

Since the beginning of the COVID-19 pandemic, the mental health crisis in our schools has become increasingly more severe, and the consequences can be distressing and potentially tragic. FEA has developed an impactful in-district program that has helped many school districts throughout the state support students (and adults) grappling with Adverse Childhood Experiences (ACEs) and trauma through a framework of Healing Centered Engagement (HCE) that supports Positive Childhood Experiences (PCEs).

If your students (and educators) are struggling, you can allocate your ES-SER funds for FEA's HCE program, which empowers staff to identify and address the systemic issues hindering students and teachers from attaining their highest educational and personal goals.

Contact Donna McInerney today at dmcinerney@njpsa.org or (609) 860-1200 to develop an action plan to help your students and staff through Healing Centered Engagement.
