UNFPA relies on both core and non-core resources to fulfill its mandate. Sustaining a solid core funding base and a favorable balance between core and non-core resources is crucial for conducting our work in complex environments and for responding to unforeseen challenges. The UN Global Funding Compact's 30% target for core resources is an ideal mix, which provides the predictability, flexibility and agility needed to deliver impactful responses on the ground.

[1] In 2022, UNFPA was requested by the United Nations Board of Auditors to modify its accounting policy for revenue recognition for contributions to core resources. Because of this change, all figures for both core and non-core resources in 2023 are shown as contributions received, i.e. the amount of cash transferred to UNFPA in a given year. The figures for 2022 have been restated to also reflect contributions received to allow for comparability of data between 2022 and 2023. Data prior to 2022 remain shown as revenue figures, i.e., amounts recognized as revenue in the year in which the agreements were signed.

Regular resources, or core resources, are the bedrock of UNFPA's work. These funds are unrestricted, allowing flexibility to respond based on needs and priorities. Every result, even those achieved through non-core funding, would not have been possible without core.

While core funding remains the gold standard, non-core resources can range in their degree of flexibility from highly flexible to tightly earmarked. Predictable and flexible non-core resources sustain and grow UNFPA's work.

UNFPA's four global thematic funds – the Supplies Partnership, the Maternal and Newborn Health, Humanitarian and Population Data Thematic Funds – are closely linked to UNFPA's three transformative results and only lightly earmarked. UNFPA encourages all Member States to prioritize these quality funding instruments when allocating non-core resources.

Pooled funds offer flexible and predictable non-core funding for the UN system. UNFPA serves as an Administrative Agent for diverse pooled funds, working side-by-side with other UN organizations to eliminate gender-based violence, enhance health systems, and advance sexual and reproductive health and rights.

[2] Pools funds managed by UNFPA are those where UNFPA is serving as the Administrative Agent. These figures represent the total funding received by UNFPA, of which UNFPA maintains a portion and disburses the remainder to the other participating UN entities.

UNFPA would like to thank its funding partners for their support in 2023.

With the support of our partners, UNFPA was able to expand rights and choices and reach the most vulnerable women, girls and young people across the world. Together we made great strides towards zero unmet need for family planning, zero preventable maternal deaths, and zero gender-based violence and harmful practices.
