

Focusing Global Attention on Propaganda: The Museum's State of Deception: The Power of Nazi Propaganda exhibition in Paris, France

experiencing a rise in antisemitism, hate, and extremism, the Museum's work, and our ability to be responsive to new developments, takes on ever greater urgency. Thanks to your generous support, this past year the Museum was on the front lines—teaching the lessons of the Holocaust and their continued relevance to an expanding global audience.

Students at a French high school were among the first to get a guided tour of the special exhibition State of Deception: The Power of Nazi Propaganda when it opened in Paris. A series of exhibition-related posters is available in 10 languages, including Arabic, Chinese, and Spanish, and can be downloaded for free from the Museum's website. Vincent Huber for the US Holocaust Memorial Museum

Dear Friends,

The entries of the international “Holocaust cartoon contest” lined the walls of a gallery in Tehran, but the hate-filled images were also spreading across social media into the hands of impressionable youth. The Museum’s condemnation, swift and targeted, was featured on Iranwire’s website and social channels—an independent online news service published to circumvent the regime’s control of the Internet—and a Museum partner in developing Persian-language resources to bring the truth to the people of Iran.

This is just one of the many ways in which the Museum seeks to teach the lessons of the Holocaust and their continued relevance to an expanding global audience.

RAISING AWARENESS GLOBALLY As part of our initiative on the dangers of propaganda in the age of the Internet, our exhibition State of Deception: The Power of Nazi Propaganda opened at the Paris City Hall in January—it’s now traveling to three additional venues across France. We partnered with the European Commission in Brussels to host a film screening of Denial and a public discussion on attempts to distort the truth in the very lands where the Holocaust happened. Our multilingual online Holocaust Encyclopedia, the definitive digital resource on the Holocaust for students and educators, had 18 million visitors last year from some 200 countries.

ENGAGING YOUTH We continued to expand the network of American college students who are being challenged to think critically about why and how the Holocaust happened and inspired to combat hate in their communities. In conjunction with Seattle-based Citizen University, our William Levine Family Institute for Holocaust Education hosted a National Campus Leaders Summit with student leaders from ten universities across the country. The Jack, Joseph and Morton Mandel Center for Advanced Holocaust Studies created a new digital learning tool—Experiencing History—giving college faculty and students access to original documentation from the period.

WORKING WITH LEADERS Engaging those responsible for shaping society is core to our mission. Our Simon-Skjodt Center for the Prevention of Genocide continued its research and public outreach efforts to highlight the ongoing genocidal crimes of ISIS and the war crimes of Syria’s Assad regime. This included hosting a series of bipartisan briefings on Capitol Hill with photographic evidence of atrocities perpetrated against Syrian civilians, which was smuggled out of the country by a former Syrian military photographer.

More than 150 cartoons comprised the May 2016 exhibition in Tehran and spread like wildfire on the Internet and social media.

The National Campus Leaders Summit brought student leaders from ten universities to dive deep into the history of the Holocaust and explore its relevance for today’s college students.

Below: Holocaust survivor Alfred Münzer spoke at an event hosted by the US Senate Committee on Foreign Relations and US House of Representatives Foreign Affairs Committee to recognize the atrocities and crimes against humanity suffered by Syrian civilians.

PRESERVING TRUTH The Museum's greatest asset is the collection of record on the Holocaust. This spring the Museum's National Institute for Holocaust Documentation moved into its new home with the dedication of the David and Fela Shapell Family Collections, Conservation and Research Center. This center will enable the Museum to continue to build, preserve, and make this body of evidence globally accessible and will serve as a dynamic hub for education and scholarship.

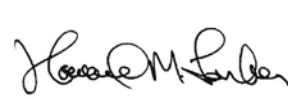

The Museum's greatest challenge and responsibility is keeping this singular event relevant for the future. That demands that we continue to explore the complex questions Holocaust history raises. As we approach our 25th anniversary in spring 2018, we will open our next 25 years true to that legacy, with a special exhibition on Americans and the Nazi threat.

We will accelerate our efforts to rescue the evidence of the Holocaust, generate new scholarship, confront denial and dangerous antisemitism, reach young people in the United States and abroad, and be a voice for victims today that was denied the Jews of Europe.

As in all of our work, we seek to challenge assumptions, deepen understanding, and provoke important questions. If we want the future to be different from the past, people need to see this history as relevant to their lives—especially young people. This is what your support makes possible. Thank you for your continued generosity.

A student leader who participated in one of our leadership summits said it better than we can...

“We’re the next people who are going to be in charge of this world. Thank you for giving us the tools... I know we can create positive change for the future.”

HATE IS THE ENEMY. BUT SO IS TIME.

IN A DECADE, less than 1% of World War II veterans will be alive and the youngest Holocaust survivor will be 81. Who do we want to tell these stories to the 1.9 billion young people across the globe who need to hear them?
