PLACES AND FEATURES OF INTEREST

Church House in grounds of Chew Magna Church

Monument to John de Hautville

Look out for the strange monument to John de Hautville in Chew Magna Church. He was a bold and valiant warrior, standing seven feet tall, who served Edward III during the Hundred Years War. He was rewarded for his service by being given the Royal Manor of Norton. Finding it such a poor place he renamed it Norton-Mal-Reward. His 16th century tomb is wrongly ascribed to the right of Henry III.

15th Century bridge over River Chew

Chew Magna

Chew Magna was once a prosperous town with manufacturing and even its own gas works. Its importance began in medieval times when the Bishop of Bath and Wells established a retreat here. A small part of this summer palace still survives at Chew Court. The church, with its fine 15th century tower has much of interest and Church House, a 16th century building inside the churchyard, has served many purposes; these include church ales, a school room, poor house and a pest house. It is now imaginatively refurbished as a community centre.

Tun Bridge

This is an excellent example of a 15th century bridge, note the three pointed arches. Look out for the stone trough on the left-hand side. When the village was infected with smallpox villages left money in this trough to pay farmers who brought food to the bridge. The trough was filled with vinegar in an attempt to prevent the spread of the disease.

At Battle Lane turn right and follow the road. Take the lower road crossing ford by footbridge. Go up the hill and under a footbridge to the main road.

After the bridge take the stile on the left, bearing right to the next stile and cross Chew/Pensford Road. Walk up the drive to the main house gates, bear right and follow the path to the churchyard. Take the path on the right to smaller gate and walk down the road.

Turn left into the High Street and continue until you meet several stone toadstools.

Turn right just before the toadstools and left over the two bridges continuing on to Dumper's Lane. At junction turn left along Tunbridge Road and return to the village centre for buses back to Bristol.

Opposite Fisher Lodge, go over the stile and follow footpath over 4 wooden stiles. At the bottom of the field turn left to the bridge, and go over the stone stile. The bridge was built by the lord of Chew Court to avoid paying a toll at Chew Magna.

After getting off the bus walk along the High Street to the T-junction by the chapel. Cross Tunbridge Road to the raised footpath and turn right past the fire station.
